Masses, associations, aggregations—the magnitude of life, creation, and past. A moment or second is only a fragment of existence. Tangible or intangible fabrications are products of groups, not of an individual. And foretime is a collection of yesterdays and the collections of which they consist. School is just this, a gathering of masses.

Gathering together the events and people of the past, memories forge personalities. Socially, emotionally, and academically the accumulation of these instances creates a thing termed maturity.

In associating with people and concepts, impressions formed embedded themselves in knowledge. Every idea, feeling, occurrence, and sight affect the mind. Slowly, in the years of high school, impressions evolve into personalities, a mass of influences from friends, teachers, and ideals.

ADMINISTRATION and faculty constitute one section of the school, the headpiece. They are the directors, leaders, and instructors of the masses of Tucker.

Mr. Doyle attends educators' New Jersey convention

104 faculty members, over 2000 students, 17 separate buildings, and 30 clubs on a 38-acre campus were all parts of the responsibility of principal B. T. Doyle, Jr. Keeping abreast with the latest educational theories, Mr. Doyle traveled to Atlantic City, New Jersey, to attend the annual convention of the National Association of Secondary School Principals. Presenting the newest ideas which have been tried in the nation's schools, the assemblage made an effort to anticipate the future direction of high schools. After the principals viewed teaching aids and related school items, they discussed topics such as public relations, instructions, extra-curricular activities, discipline, use of federal funds, and administration-faculty relations.

Pausing momentarily from work, Mr. Doyle takes time to discuss information contained in a senior's college recommendation.

A maddening situation develops as Mr. Deane dispenses hundreds of textbooks each semester to eager students.

Announcing that juniors may now go to the assembly, Mr. Neale regulates the flow of students to programs by calling grades to leave at three-minute intervals.

Compiling the comprehensive statistical report on school attendance which must be recorded by both the county and the state, Mr. Morris uses an adding machine to rapidly process the time consuming report and verify teachers' registers.

Increased enrollment necessitates administrative assistant

Ranging from fines on lost or damaged books to securing janitorial and police services for social and sports events, the duties of Mr. Morris demanded versatility. In addition to compiling monthly reports of school buses, he chartered buses for field trips, obtained sponsors for Girls' and Boys' State, and disciplined the seventh and eighth graders.

Maintaining discipline and attendance, Mr. Deane approved early dismissals for juniors and seniors. To more easily understand the problems teachers faced, Mr. Deane instructed a class of United States History in summer school and attended a class at the University of Virginia.

Due to an enrollment of over 2,000, an increased faculty and an enlarged campus size, the administrative staff required the addition of another member. To fill this need, Mr. Neale assumed the position of administrative assistant. He regulated attendance, early dismissals and discipline of freshmen and sophomores. Receiving from eighty to one hundred claims per year, he processed the insurance transactions for injured students.

Guidance compiles booklet offering occupational data

"Employment Bound?", a publication edited by Mrs. Deck, provided the non-college student with directions to follow in the world of work. In an effort to supply students with printed guidance material, the senior counselor condensed information from many references into a concise, informative pamphlet. Opening with a dictionary of job sources available in the library and the office of the guidance counselor, the booklet contained five subdivisions explaining major vocational fields: technical schools, business training, practical nursing, professional nursing and cosmetology. Listing many occupational and technical schools, the light blue paperback book outlined curricula, entrance requirements, tuition, and expenses. The only publication of its kind in Henrico County, "Employment Bound?" set guidelines for other area counselors and educators.

English Department initiates senior World Literature course

English took on a new look for underclassmen as the study of linguistics replaced grammar. The new approach involved a more liberal definition of previously strict rules of usage and clarified grammatical structure by having a definite purpose for each word in the sentence.

For seniors a new course, World

Literature, was initiated. Taught by William Caldwell and including works of authors Ibáñez, Tolstoy, and La Fontaine, the course offered a global view of literature lacking in regular literature studies.

Senior English students traveled to the Virginia Museum Theater to see "The School for Wives." This farce by Molière involved an old gentleman's attempt to train a young girl to be his bride.

A section of the new building became a resource center for English and foreign language teachers, providing material for planning classes and projects.

Before the Literary Club, Mr. Caldwell explains Piggy's glasses' symbolism in Golding's novel tracing the faults of society to human nature, Lord of the Flies.

The construction of the new building allowed certain rooms separated by a partition to become one, thus making two teachers available to aid students taking the same course. This allowed the teachers to work together with the classes, one to lecture to the entire group and one to give individual aid. Mrs. Harrod and Mr. Ford assist senior English students in the study of English literature.

Student math assistants make individual attention possible

The mathematics department initiated a program of math assistants which helped teachers to aid individual students having trouble in certain areas. Utilizing their study hall time, the four assistants, Danny Layman, Linda Christopher, Mike Ribakov, and Harvey Bowles, graded papers and made out quiz problems for the teachers.

For recommended seniors the advanced college preparatory algebra course used the introductory analysis program, which was a continuation of the course of study used in lower algebra and geometry courses. The college-bound seniors received an introduction to advanced trigonometry, logic, and integral calculus.

Adding to the visual aids equipment, the department obtained five new overhead projectors. Some of the teachers took courses in the operation of the machines to best utilize their potential.

Shattered glassware, broken desks, and smoke-covered walls are the results of an arsonist's fire which burned in an equipment and teachers' preparation room during early hours of March 25.

Converted science classroom serves for project preparation

As a convenience for science students, the science department converted a classroom into a student project room. Outfitted with microscopes, flasks, and Bunsen burners, the facility was helpful to students who had time to work on their semester projects during study hall or whose projects required equipment not available at home.

On March 25 a fire in the science building destroyed a teachers' resource room and burned several charts and demonstration models, shattering plans for Tucker's biennial science fair and postponing deadlines for turning in science projects. A school-wide effort to clean up the classrooms blackened with smoke developed as many students in all grades volunteered to wash glassware or clean windows.

Adding to its supplies, the department obtained new equipment, including a gyroscope wheel, a dissectible transformer, a $400 analytical balance, and an oxygen tank to repair broken glassware.

20th Century History course focuses on world situations

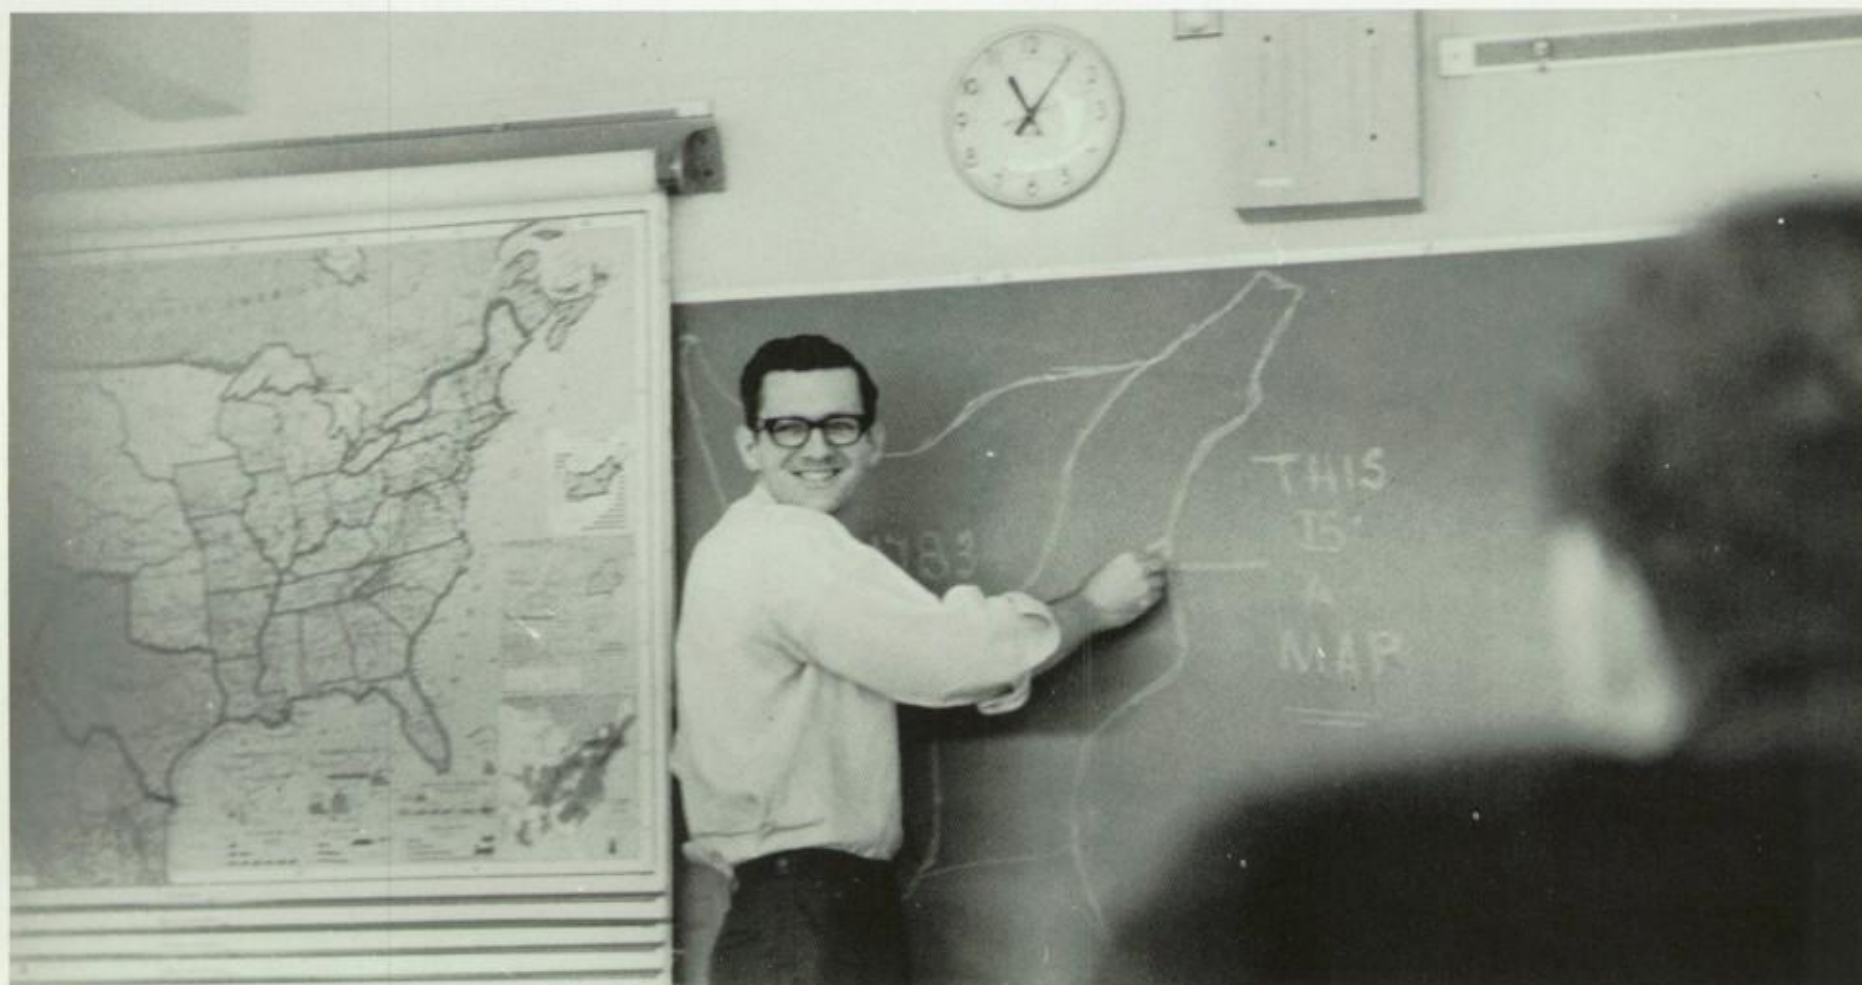

Tracing the development of world situations and crises, a new course, Twentieth Century History offered an in-depth study of current events. Using a paperback textbook and daily newspapers, Mr. Galyen taught the elective course to juniors and seniors.

In March, Mr. Carter and Mrs. Reynolds escorted two government classes to the massive, marble edifices of Washington, D. C. After hearing a House subcommittee's debate concerning credit bureaus and invasion of privacy, the group of thirty-nine seniors met the Honorable David Satterfield in the Rayburn Building. During their visit to the House of Representatives, the students witnessed the 435-member roll call and then continued to the Senate where they saw Senate Minority Leader Everett Dirksen of Illinois. At the F.B.I. Building, the students saw many methods of tracking down and capturing criminals. The immensity of the Library of Congress as well as the smallness and grandeur of the Supreme Court awed and amazed the students of modern history. Touring the National Archives, which contains the original Constitution as well as other historical documents, also added to the value of the trip.

Using a pencil for a baton, Mrs. Elsey leads second-year German class in singing folk song, "Du, Du Im Herzen Liegst mir Im Herzen."

Throughout the year a combined class of third- and fourth-year Latin students taught by Mrs. Burgess translated Vergil's epic, the Aeneid. The classic adventure story of Aeneas' voyage from Troy to Latium served as a study of the origins of English word usage and as an insight into Roman heritage.

Teachers acquire examination skills at language convention

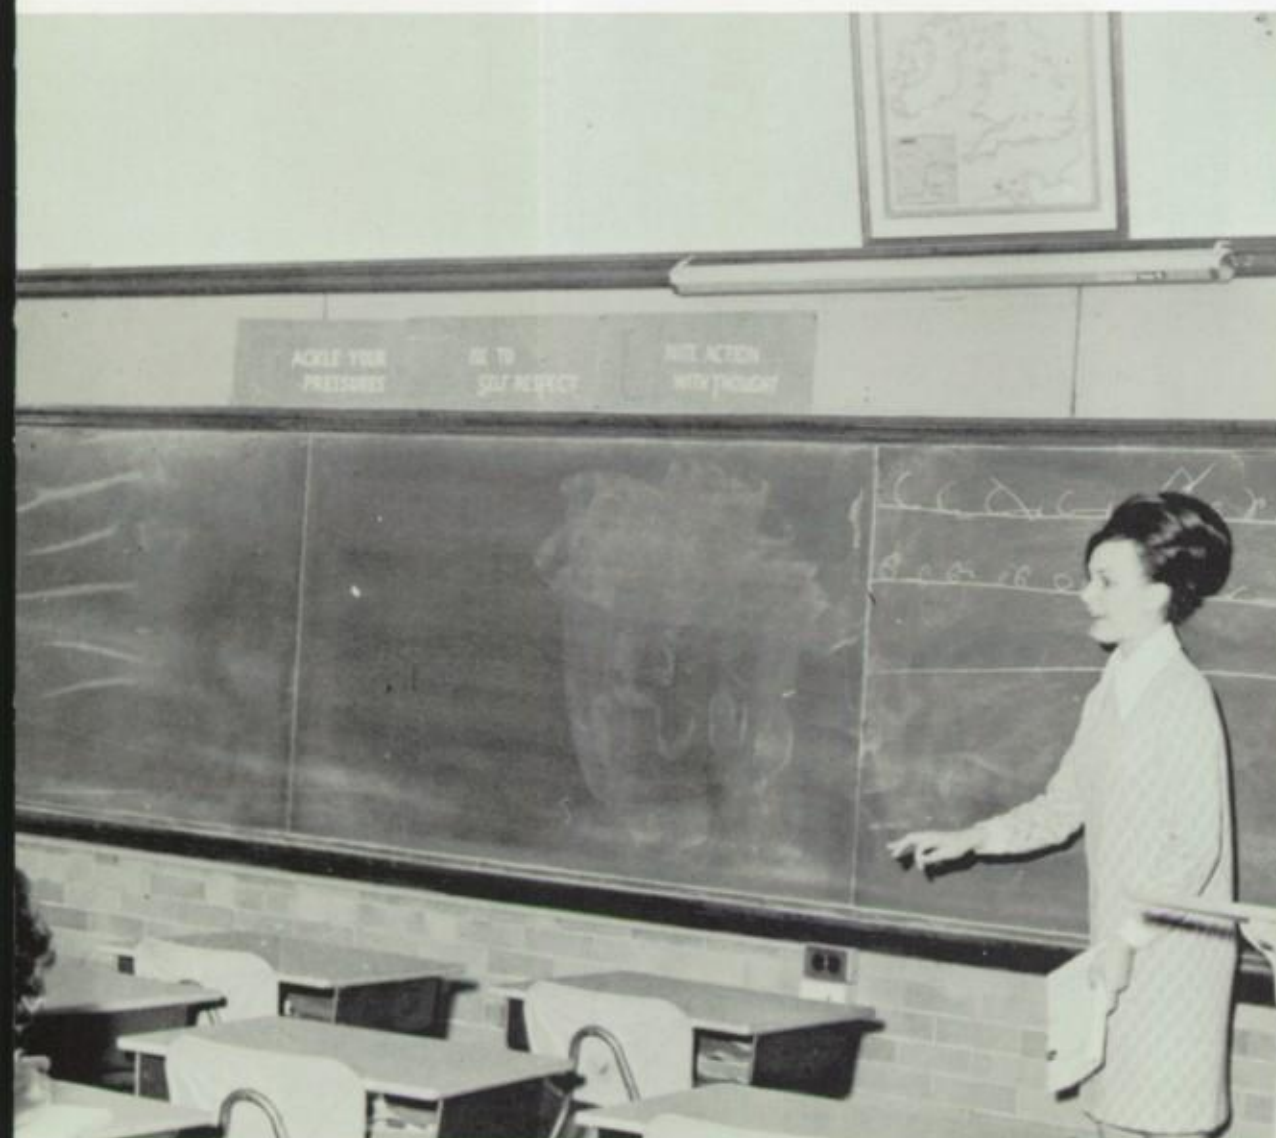

At the Modern Foreign Language Association convention at Natural Bridge, Virginia, attended by Miss Nixon, Mrs. Bean, Mrs. Neagle, and Miss Bowles, teachers took tests which demonstrated variety in types of foreign language examinations. They also discussed the problems of transition from the high school level to the college level of foreign language study.

Fourth-year French students translated the works of outstanding French authors and wrote papers on the different periods of French literature. For Christmas Latin students created greeting cards announcing the Feast of Saturnalia, and Spanish students learned the Yuletide traditions of Mexico. Singing German folk songs was part of the study of Germany in Mrs. Elsey's classes while Latin classes constructed projects dealing with different aspects of Roman architecture and art.

VEPCO conducts tour of new data processing center

VEPCO's data processing center, one of the most advanced in the United States, offered a tour of facilities in order to give area educators insight into the future of teaching data processing in Henrico County. Members of the business department observed such modern mechanisms as a storage unit which contained 850,000 customer accounts. When an account number was fed into the computer, the entire previous record flashed onto a screen. Escorted by Mr. Schermehorn, manager of the data processing department, the teachers also viewed a key punch machine, a sorter, and other equipment designed to record, file, and deliver information quickly and efficiently.

Band, chorus utilize vacant area for sheet music library

Speech students learned better diction and pronunciation with the use of the forty-five-letter Eastern Phonetic System. Using a different letter for each vowel and consonant sound in the English language, the alphabet showed students the proper pronunciation of words and phrases by eliminating the confusion caused by silent letters and long and short vowels.

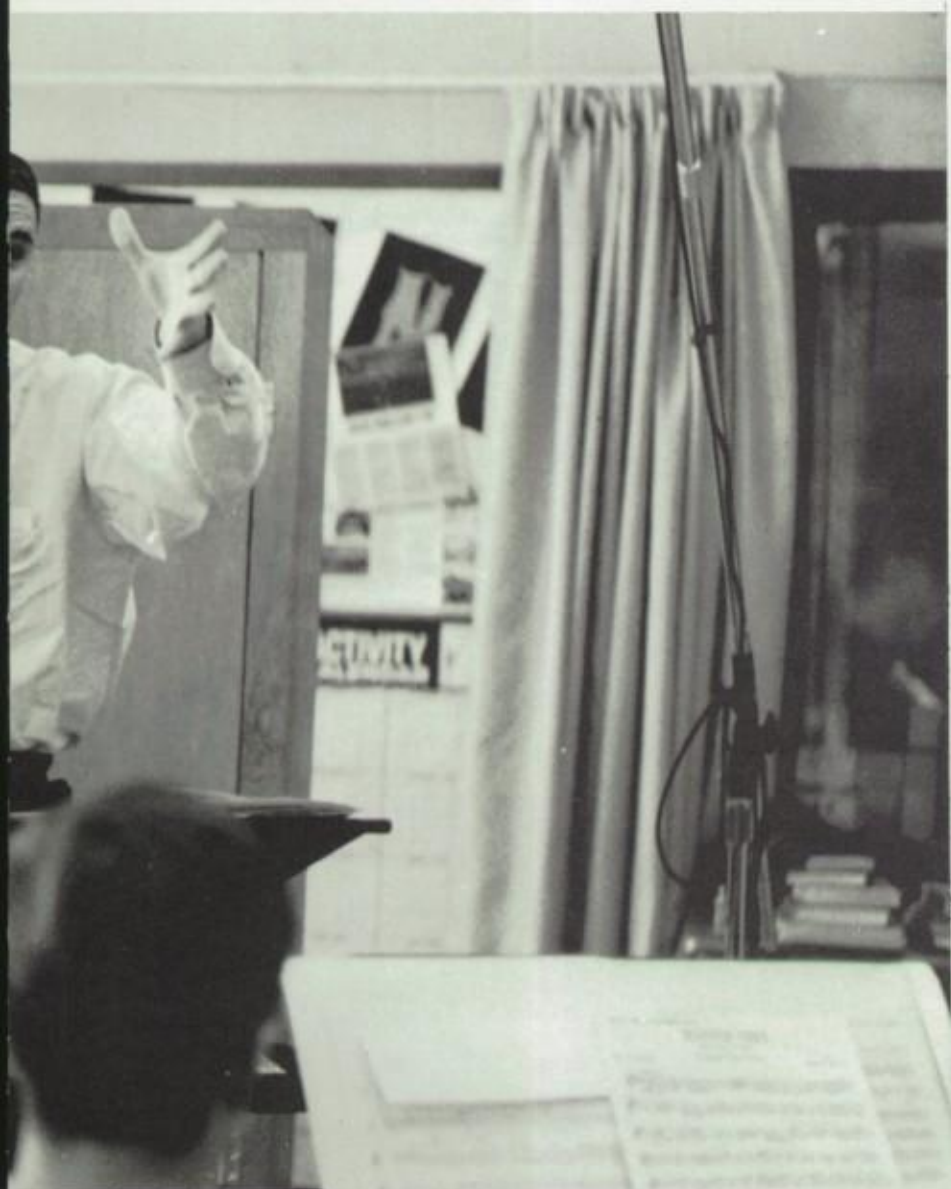

In dramatics classes students learned the origins and history of the theater as well as modern techniques of set design, make-up, lighting, and directing. Helping prepare for the production of "Diary of Anne Frank" and "Funny Girl," the dramatists gained practical experience in the areas of drama and musical comedy.

For a music library the band and chorus converted an office in order to store files of sheet music. Junior varsity band members learned to sight read music and to play musical scales. The seventh-grade general music course gave students basic music skills as well as developing interests in Tucker's choral music program, while chorus students learned rudiments of dynamics and interpretation in preparing pieces for concerts.

As he conducts the opening bars of Haydn Wood's "Mannin Veen", Mr. Thier cues the clarinet solo's entrance in the score.

Miss Bonner discusses the role of Fanny Brice in "Funny Girl" with Lynne Salsbury. In her last year as Tucker's dramatics teacher, Miss Bonner helped choose the musical comedy, select its cast, and plan its direction before leaving to become a stewardess for United Air Lines.

Preparing for a holiday concert, Mr. Stambach rehearses Conley's "The Sound of Christmas" with the Mixed Chorus.

During the intermission of a performance of "Funny Girl," drama teacher Mrs. Bryant discusses the musical's success.

Showcase displays reproduction of sculpture by Modigliani

Hands gloved in plaster, Mrs. Dodd shapes the giant flower pot for use on the Art Club Homecoming float, an enormous psychedelic daisy. Standing 18 feet, the massive float towered over the power lines above the football field, halting the procession.

In Cafeteria III, outstanding past years in football, basketball, baseball, and track dominated the orange and blue mural painted by advanced art students Wayne Dodson and Mike Melton. Employing the colors red and black, Glenn Askew designed a modern tableau featuring the letters JRT in Cafeteria II.

Miss D'Amico devoted many hours and much patience to silk-screening the black, orange, and green posters publicizing "Funny Girl." She also served as Art Director for the musical, designing and painting all sets.

In an effort to acquaint the students with both amateur and professional art, the department displayed pupils' creative painting on exhibit screens in building 10. Acquired through the county, reproductions of paintings by Picasso as well as sculpture by Modigliani decorated the art showcase and the impressionistic styles of the modern artists of the 1960's.

Girls switch from spatulas, needles to hammers, saws

To increase understanding between the industrial arts and home economics programs, students in each area traded classes; one week contained a condensation of the material usually covered in a year. In addition to learning how to make elementary household repairs and how to use hammers and screwdrivers, the girls cut heart-shaped lipstick holders out of wood.

The boys' course devoted one day to each of five major topics of household management. After cooking one type of food to yield at least five different dishes, the participants learned the necessary techniques for mending rips in clothing and sewing on buttons as well as how to plan a balanced meal and maintain good grooming habits.

Tucker's Industrial Arts program widened its scope as it offered a night course for interested adults. One night each week during second semester, the class, taught by shop teacher Jack DeVore, worked in the fields of woodwork, plastics, and ceramics—each participant concentrating in the particular material that interested him.

For the students, the department strived to give a general orientation in basic constructional materials and processes of the modern industrial era. The courses helped not only to prepare those interested in careers in industrial and technical fields, but also to develop skills in the safe use of home tools and machines.

After explaining basic architectural procedures, Mr. Timberlake supervises practice in one of his drafting classes. The original plate helps demonstrate correct techniques of dimension, accuracy, and labeling involved in planning the blueprint of the detailed floor plan of a tri-level house.

Beamingly, Mr. Doyle accepts from teachers Miss Englesbe and Mr. Vaden the special education classes' seven-foot Santa Claus.

Special education classes create papier-mâché Santa Claus

Each day twenty-two students from western Henrico County attended Tucker's two special education classes. Taught by Miss Catherine Englesbe and T. Burwell Vaden, Jr., the class offered a regular curriculum of subjects which included spelling, American history, literature, grammar, and earth science. The two classes were divided by levels—Miss Englesbe teaching from kindergarten through seventh grade and Mr. Vaden teaching on the eighth grade level. All students also attended regular physical education classes.

Throughout the year the classes participated in special projects. A collage of design and color formed psychedelic tables for art work.

Between Thanksgiving and Christmas a huge Santa Claus slowly took shape from paste, paint, and scrap paper and later became a yuletide decoration for the office. In February mobiles of crimson and white valentines hung from the ceiling and windows of the two classrooms.

Coaches conduct basketball skill tests to find new potential for future teams

Bulldozers worked throughout the year to clear nine acres of woods behind the bus parking lot to make way for the construction of a new athletic field. The new facilities will include tennis courts, a baseball diamond, and a practice field for physical education classes, thus keeping the football field in the best condition for team play.

Dribbling through an obstacle course of chairs and shooting baskets from various distances were parts of the seventh grade boys' basketball skill tests. The information gained from the tests will help the coaches to forecast the limitations and potential of the varsity and junior varsity squads in future years.

Students visit General Assembly, see government in action

Seventh grade department head Mrs. Pelfrey watches the Tigers execute a skillful play as her hungry daughter Carole waits patiently for her mother to pass the popcorn box.

As a part of an art project, Jane Gunning, Janice Stokes, and Ann Privette taught four seventh grade classes the fundamental concepts of drawing. With the use of a color wheel, the pupils learned about values, tones, intensity, and scheme.

On May 8, the homerooms of Mrs. Brown and Miss Faulkner embarked on a visit to the Virginia General Assembly. At the Capitol, they observed Virginia lawmakers at work. Mrs. Brown's class was particularly interested to see a classmate, Rob McClintock, serving as a page during the 1968 session. The students then left the General Assembly to travel to the nearby White House of the Confederacy, where they saw and heard explanations of Civil War firearms, military leaders, and campaigns.

Microfilm reader eases magazine research for term papers

With the addition of books, phonograph records, and films, materials for study and research of term papers became more easily accessible. Eliminating inconveniences caused by lost editions of periodicals, the microfilm reader proved a time-saving device, allowing researchers to scan an entire year's publications of a magazine. A significant contribution to the quality of library service developed through the use of modern techniques and audio-visual aids.

The Arretha B. Astrop Memorial, a fund started by the Senior Class of 1967 in memory of a former Tucker English teacher, donated reference books valued at seven hundred and seventy-five dollars. In order to insure a satisfactory selection of books, English teachers requested that students list books which were most helpful in writing term papers. Mrs. Cook, head librarian, then conferred with the teachers and ordered the books.

Pasting a book pocket in the book of a recently acquired volume, Mrs. Green helps in the placement of books to meet the increasing needs of students.

Consulting a cumulative record, guidance secretary Mrs. Wright verifies student's college entrance scores and rank.

Office phone calls number approximately 200 per day

Writing 970 checks, filling out 2,500 receipts and typing 180 absentee lists helped to fill the school year for Mrs. Mary Hayes, Mrs. Louise Jones, and Mrs. Shirley Smith. After managing over seventy-five club and miscellaneous accounts, they typed an average of twelve letters a day and answered hundreds of questions for students, parents, administration, faculty, and visitors. Inquiries ranged from a mother's call requesting a search for her son's lost jacket to seniors' questions concerning graduation activities.

Mrs. Mary Wright, guidance secretary for the five counselors, collected money for college entrance tests and forwarded records of transfer students to high schools throughout the United States. By processing seniors' transcripts to colleges and future employers, she helped to carry out the ultimate goal of the guidance department—to prepare students for a rewarding life in today's world.

delivery to the two other cafeterias while Mrs. B. Royster cleans strainers used in preparing cole slaw. Various combinations of different foods provided menus that assured balanced diets for buyers of cafeteria lunches.

Cafeteria workers help in preparing club, athletic banquets

Cafeteria workers accomplished the difficult task of providing lunches in three shifts in three cafeterias. Beginning early in the day, the cooks hurried to have the food ready by the time the first lines of hungry students arrived. Often the cafeteria workers stayed late to prepare a special banquet for a club or team. Mrs. Wilda Young, cafeteria manager, directed the work of the cafeteria staff.

Tucker's nurse, Mrs. Marjorie Hall, was always present to treat any possible injuries occurring at school. Her many cases included accidents from sports or gym activities, cuts by sharp pencils, and scrapes from falls. Many winter cases involved influenza as a mild epidemic sent many students home to recover.

Custodians kept the school heated and operational in the cold winter months. After a snowfall the custodians cleared sidewalks and spread salt on icy spots. During the spring sounds of the sidewalk sweeper interrupted classroom lectures as the janitors kept the sidewalks cleared of leaves and grass clippings.

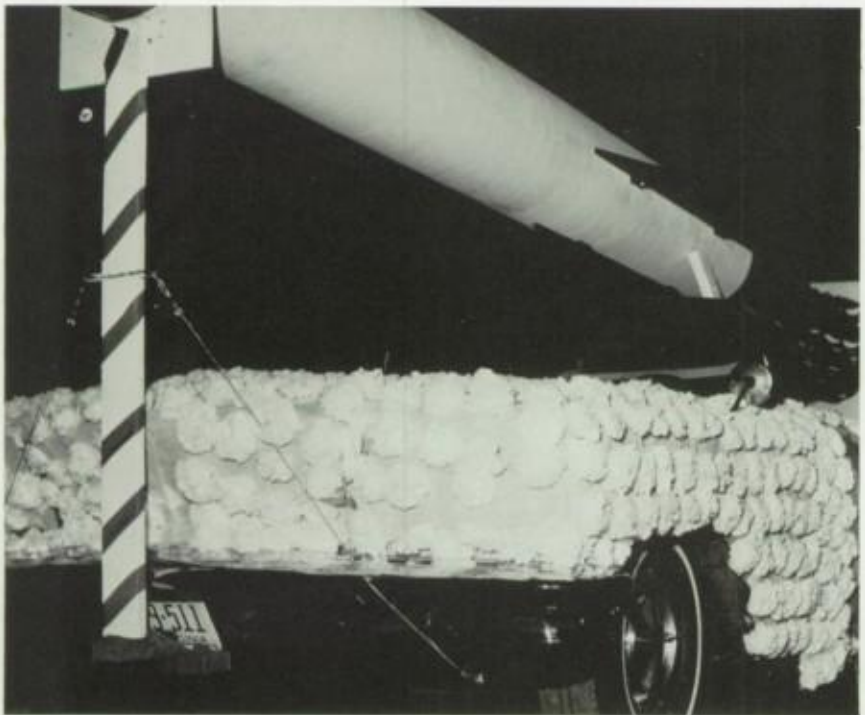

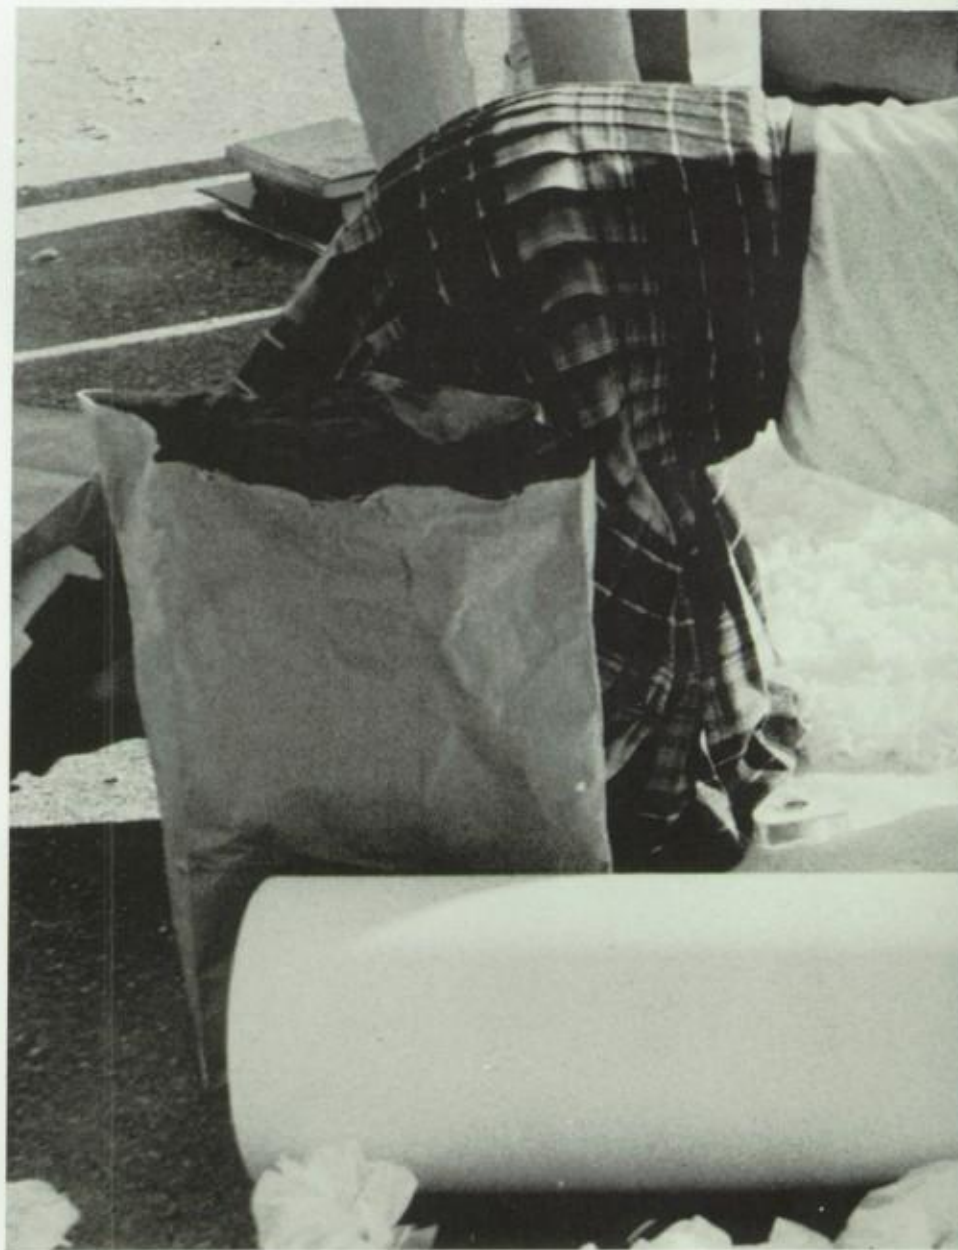

ACTIVITIES are the humor, happiness, heartbreak, and honor of a multitude of minutes. They are the single conglomeration called student life.

As the homecoming queen dances to "Moon River", four members of her court await turns to dance. Later in the evening, alumni Connie Williams, David George, Judi Lundberg, and Dickie Harris dance to music played by the soul sound of the Mustangs. The winning float, a red and white rocket, illustrates the symbol of tomorrow's progress through the continuous development of space travel and communication techniques.

Newly-crowned homecoming queen Cheryl Hite becomes a spectator again after participating in the halftime festivities.

Simulated rocket of ICT soars to first place in competition

Homecoming festivities began on Friday afternoon as semi-completed, student-designed floats arrived in the bus parking lot. Dedicated club members fought the fall breeze to attach tissue flowers to convertibles, transforming them into massive music staves, Roman galleys, and Mexican balconies. Pep Club volunteers organized the parade lineup and sponsored the float awards announced at halftime. The model of a space rocket created by the Industrial Co-operative Training won first place while the giant, yellow and green daisy of the Art Club placed second. The German Club float, replicas of a German World War I Fokker and an American-designed Spad, won third.

Competing for Homecoming Queen were the seven senior princesses: Jackie Bennett, Linda Bowden, Martha Burton, Becky Cobbs, Cheryl Hite, Bunny Miller, and Jeanne Olsen. During halftime a delighted Cheryl Hite donned the crown and received a bouquet of long-stemmed roses, beginning her reign over the game and dance.

The harvest decor provided a picturesque view for on-lookers as the Queen and her court led in dancing to music by the Mustangs.

Senior Class puts satirical gazette Tiger Rag to bed

High society, entertainment, and news articles highlighted Tiger Rag. Assisted by co-sponsors Mr. Caldwell and Mrs. Neagle, the seniors worked diligently to produce a two-hour enactment of an entertaining newspaper complete with alluring headline editors, senior girls in elegant evening gowns, introducing each act.

Aggravated by minimal salaries, striking teachers carried colorful signs reading, "Down With Parental Oppression," "Better Smoking Lounges," and "More Time for Moonlighting." Some resorted to working at night at the "Club Terrific" where folk and popular songs and a Charleston number headlined the evening.

Accompanying herself on the guitar, Alice Burkett sang a folk protest song, "Go Tell It on the Mountain." Utilizing guitar and kazoo, Wade Stonnell added country music to the show, singing "Newport News." Renee Holloway, a freshman, twirled a baton to a Tijuana Brass selection. The New York Rockettes, mop-haired and wearing frayed tennis shoes, distinguished Tucker with an appearance. Clad in multi-colored costumes, the hairy-legged group strutted gracefully through the act, a synchronized dance complete with high kicks.

Overcoming Panthers 420-115, High School Bowl team moves to semi-finals

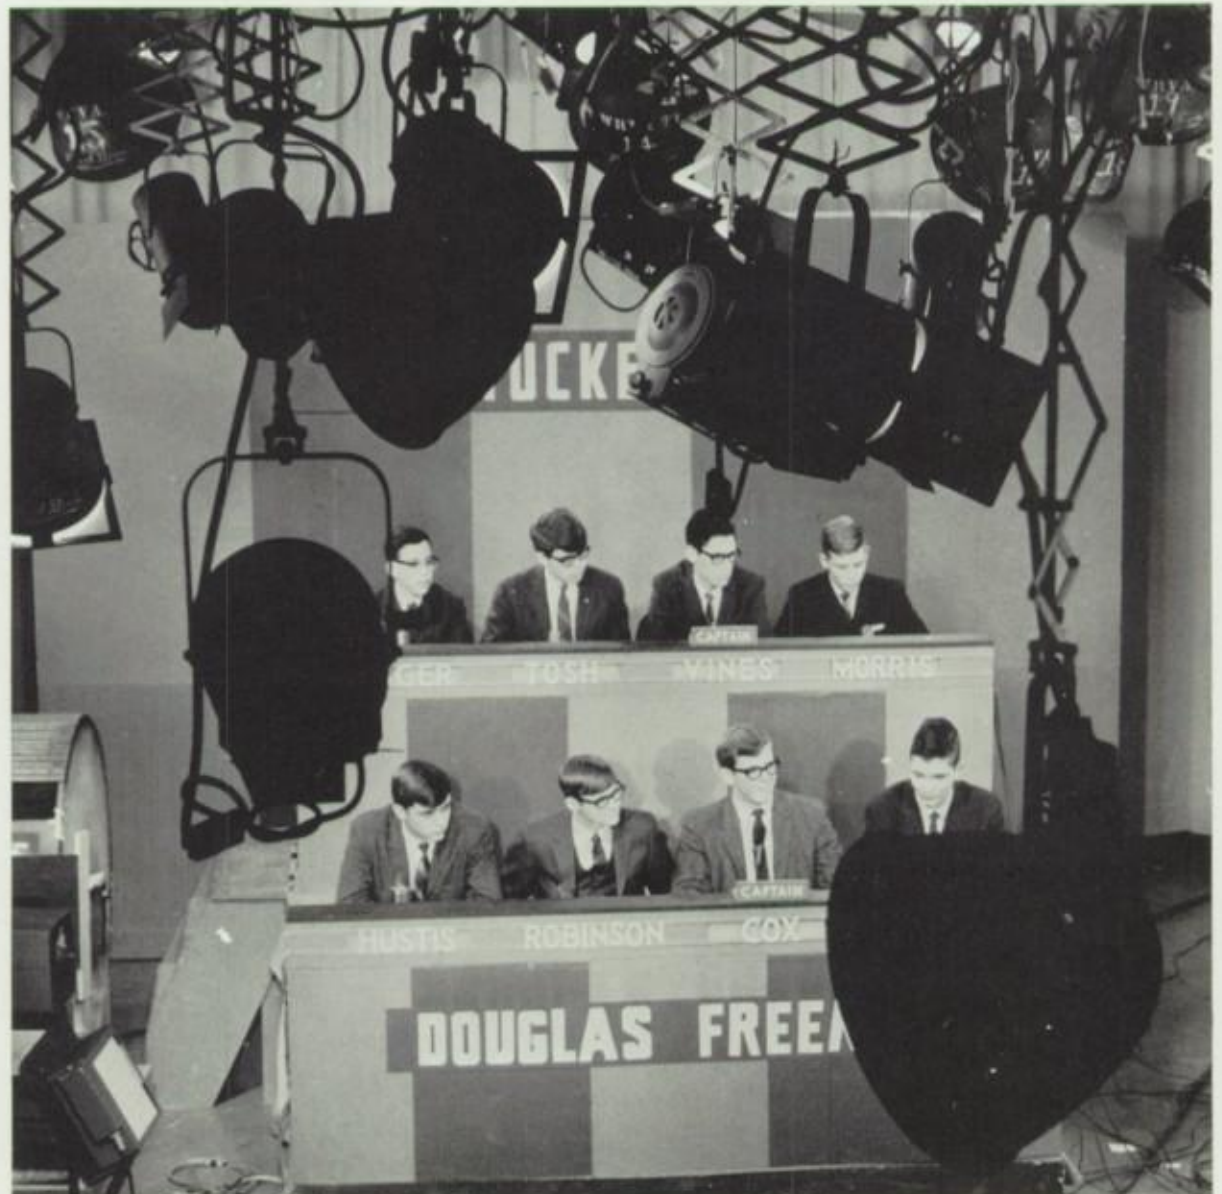

Hours of preparation for the WRVA Television program, High School Bowl, resulted in the four member team, coached by Mrs. Reynolds, tallying the highest score on record of the program. Captain Harvey Vines, Blake Morris, Dennis Tosh, David Singer and alternate Gary Jacobson answered practice questions prepared by students and faculty. Appearing on the broadcasts four times against Hermitage, Collegiate, Thomas Dale, and Douglas Freeman, the team advanced to the semi-final round.

Long, solid lines of eager couples wait for preacher

Psychedelic colors flew as the first major dance of the year, "Why Not", introduced The Ordains to the Tucker campus. Large yellow and green flowers decorated the walls as flashing green, red, and yellow lights captured the couples in mystic shadows. In addition to profits from tickets sales, entries in the raffle augmented the dance proceeds.

The Sadie Hawkins Day Dance, sponsored by the Junior Class hosted The Jokers Wild. Dogpatch also played host to a hillbilly moonshiner who left too quickly to sample his product. Enhancing the hillbilly atmosphere was an artificial fire underneath the official and operable still and a big jug of moonshine standing beside a tumbled down shack of an old mountaineer.

Chris Daniel won the balloting for Daisy Mae while Greg Lipes won the title of Lil' Abner.

The planning of the sophomore dance, "Why Not?" gets underway as class sponsor Mrs. Thier discusses arrangements for refreshments and tickets with Donna Bennett, Troy Lassiter, and Brenda Redford. A special committee provided free food for the dancers, and a local radio station awarded prizes to raffle winners. The first of its kind at Tucker, the dance featured flashing lights and giant paper flowers.

"The world's most famous springtime extravaganza," the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, invited the marching band, majorettes and pom-pom girls to participate in the Grand Feature Parade at the Handley Bowl in Winchester. Traveling over one hundred miles in crowded, stuffy buses, the group performed and captured the award for best drum major of the ninety bands entered.

In Maryland competition, the majorettes received a trophy for precision, uniformity, and twirling ability.

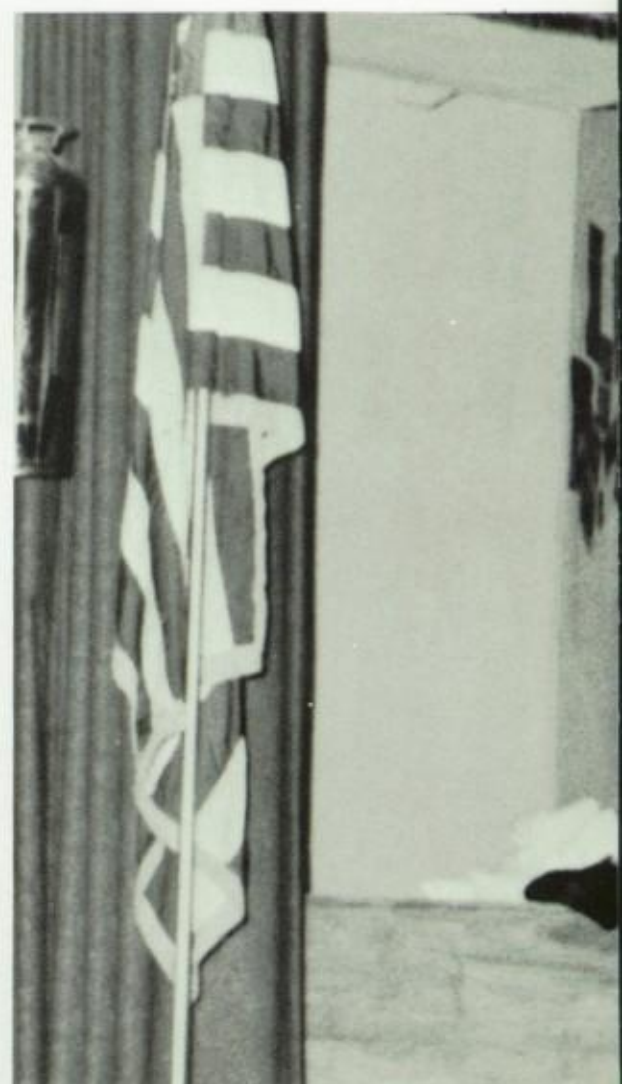

The Ensemble and the Concert Choral Group sang for the Ruritans, church functions, and women's clubs. Ten went to All-Regional and three attended All-State Chorus where vocalists worked on achieving better group uniformity and tone quality.

Nick Battye, Judi Fine place first in district contention

Tucker took two first place honors in the District One Forensic Meet, a Virginia High School League Activity. Nick Battye and Judi Fine received first place recognition for their participation in Boy's Poetry Reading and Girl's Prose, respectively. Sherry Lehmann won a second in Girl's Poetry while Harvey Vines took third place in Spelling. Also competing were Doug Edmonds, who read from Erich Remarque's All Quiet on the Western Front, and Marcia Colman, competing in Girl's Public Speaking. In the state competition in Charlottesville at the University of Virginia, Nick Battye placed second with his reading of T. S. Eliot's "The Hollow Men".

Unit set permits overall view of Thespian drama

Shriveled potatoes, dilapidated clothes, and a tabby cat heightened the realism of the first Thespian production, The Diary of Anne Frank. A unit set, one in which different actions take place simultaneously, divided the stage into four rooms on two levels. Narration by Anne, and the use of spotlights and sudden darkness magnified the emotion and suspense of the nonfictional drama about a Jewish family during the Nazi occupation of the Netherlands.

“Rat-Tat-Tat-Tat” welcomes World War I doughboys home

A Jewish girl with “funny looking legs,” Fanny Brice, headlined billboards across the country as the star of the fabulous Ziegfeld Follies. A dance routine taught to her by Eddie, the choreographer of Keeney’s Music Hall, materialized into the first hit of her career. The star Fanny married promoter Nick Arnstein, and after a honeymoon in Europe, moved into a Long Island Mansion. Investing $68,000 of Fanny’s money in a Florida gambling casino which failed, Nick stooped to embezzlement, for which he was imprisoned. Fanny vowed that she would no longer try to dominate him, but realizing that continuing their marriage would only destroy both of them, Nick left Fanny to lead her own life.

Announced by black, orange, green, and white posters, Funny Girl warranted a standing ovation closing night. Miss Bonner, leaving at mid-year, cast and blocked the production during the first semester; Mrs. Bryant took over the direction in January. Each faculty adviser had a student assistant, some of whom also had parts in the play. Judie Fine was student director of the presentation, Linda Bowden assisted Mrs. Greenwell as choreographer. Dennis Tosh aided Mr. Stamback in the musical segment of the show. Miss D’Amico with the help of the art classes, designed the sets for the twenty-three scenes of the musical. Boxes of long-stemmed roses, corsages, and a blue marble egg, a prop presented to Funny Girl by the cast, capped hours of hard work. Three nights of the performance proved to be excellent entertainment.

From his trashcan seat, Eddie (Glenn McDearmon) sleepily coaches Fanny, tirelessly practicing a dance routine for an audition. In robe and nightcap, Mrs. Brice pleads with her daughter to come to bed. Gossiping over a hand of poker, Mrs. Brice’s friends discuss Fanny’s offer to star in the Follies. In her first role with Ziegfeld, Fanny plays an expecting bride in the production, “His Love Makes Her Beautiful.”

Convention recognizes Al Gibson as International Trustee

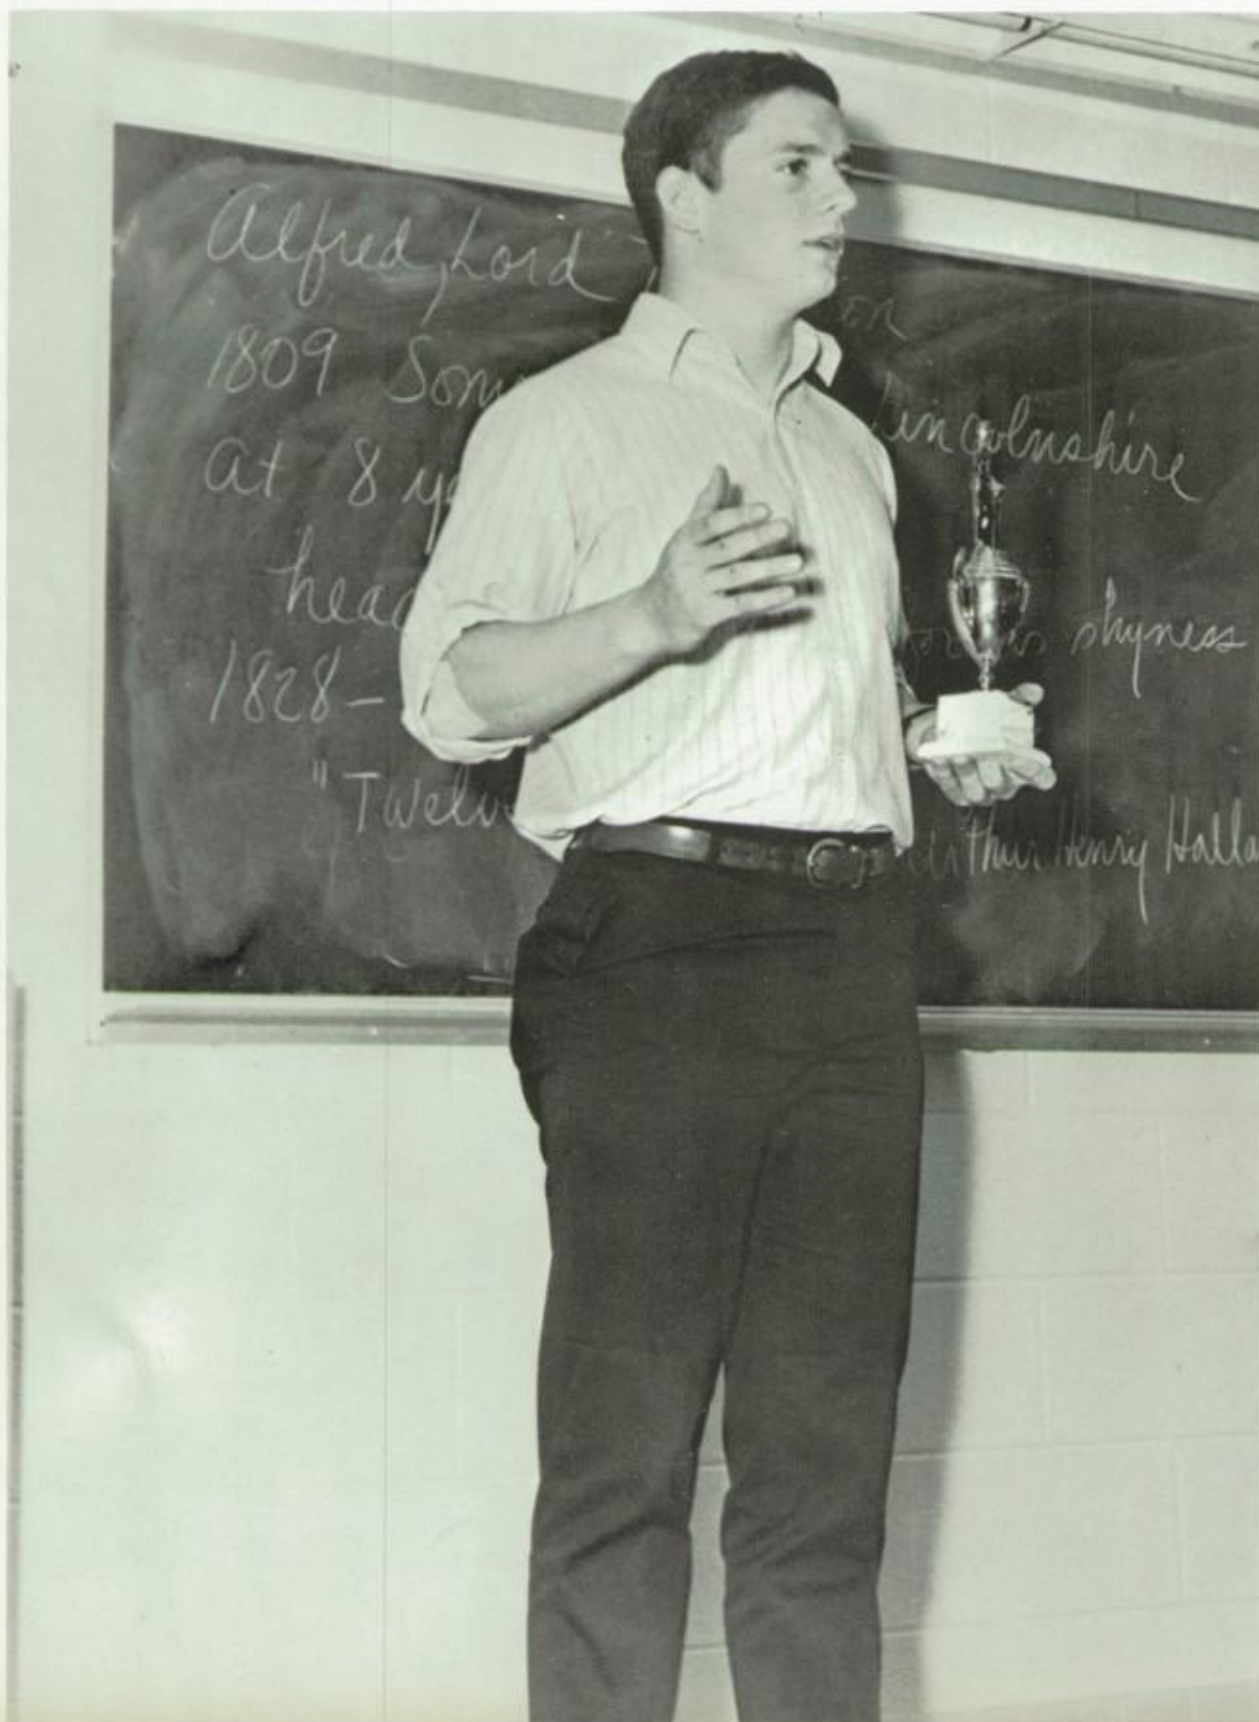

Delegates from 144 Key Clubs met in March for the District Convention in Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia. Informal round-table discussions intrigued the 1200 boys as they exchanged ideas concerning projects and talked with Kiwanis Club members. Al Gibson won a first place trophy in the Oratorical Contest as well as an endorsement for International Trustee from the Capital District. International Key Club President Mike Walters addressed the convention on the responsibility of citizenship.

J.E.B. Stuart High School in Falls Church, Virginia, hosted the forty-second annual State SCA Conference. Representing Tucker were Sandie Clayman, Mark Rubin, and Johnny Bean, officers for the SCA term beginning in May. Last year's delegate Rick Williamson served as State Program Chairman. Discussion groups offered the chance for delegates to present new ideas in the field of communications, government, and Inter-Club Council. On Saturday, Mr. Charles T. Vetter, Jr. addressed the convention on its theme, "Sail the Action Ship."

In Lexington, the Southern Interscholastic Press Association held its journalistic convention at Washington and Lee University. Delegates chose classes, discussion groups, and seminars concerning different aspects of yearbook, newspaper, and magazine productions. On the last day, the conventioners elected Dennis Gomez as president of SIPA.

Delegate Al Gibson shows the Key Club the trophy he secured in the Oratorical Contest.

Arriving home from the State SCA Conference, Johnny Bean, Mark Rubin, and Rick Williamson unpack Sandie Clayman's suitcases from one of the cars. The conference met for two days in Falls Church where delegates met in discussion groups. A large bulletin board greeted the representatives as they entered the hallway of J.E.B. Stuart High School on the sixth of April.

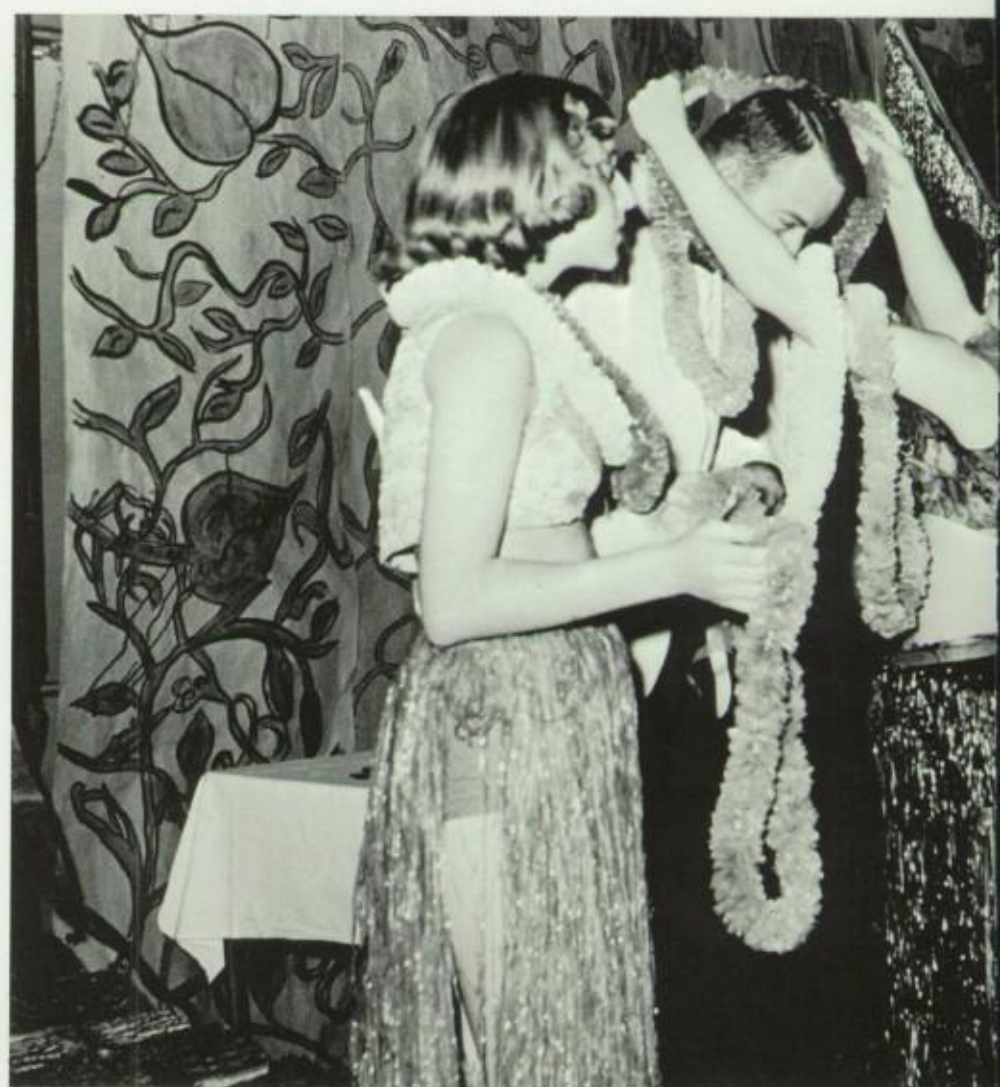

SIPA delegates Cathy Giles, Scott Mills, Debbie Garton, and Paula Tucker arise to attend classes at Washington and Lee University.

Tropical flowers, hula girls exhibit Polynesian theme

Exotic pink flowers and green jungle vines carried out the theme "Polynesian Paradise" in the lobby as couples crossed split log bridges into the gymnasium. A deep blue, nylon ceiling, purchased by the Junior Class for use at future dances, enhanced the gym. Hula girls in swishing grass skirts presented Juniors with leis and Seniors with miniature mortarboards. Couples danced under the billowing ceiling to the music of the "Soul Tramps" until the time to depart approached. They then headed for the junior and senior breakfasts, held at the Rockville Community Center and the Satellite Club.

Congressman Satterfield challenges 246 graduates

Dirt farmer day, dress-up day, orange and blue day appeared on the agenda of the graduating class's last week—Senior Week. An "open house" of the senior lounge allowed juniors to get a preview of one of the class gifts. A picnic at Bryan Park provided a break from the graduation practice.

The traditional Sunday Baccalaureate service began the commencement exercises. The Reverend Charles P. Moncure, pastor of the Church of the Holy Comforter, delivered the sermon and Reverend Zachary T. Piephoff, Jr. of Tuckahoe Presbyterian Church offered the invocation and the benediction.

Representatives of organizations and faculty department heads presented awards and scholarships on Class Night. Gary Jacobson, class president, announced the senior superlatives, chosen by vote of the class. Jan Bridge read the Last Will and Testament; Danny Layman prophesied the future of the class.

Commencement, held in the stadium, opened with the invocation by Mr. Deane, assistant principal. Congressman David E. Satterfield, III spoke on "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Salutatorian Barbara Weiss and Valedictorian Gary Jacobson addressed their fellow students about future responsibilities.

Behind a T-formation of toy tigers and a barricade of magazine posters, SCA President Rick Williamson opens the magazine drive.

SCA magazine sale, AFS week net fifteen hundred dollars

Two thousand students and teachers crowded into the stuffy, confining gymnasium. Under a backboard, fifteen toy tigers lined the court in front of a display of leading American journals as President Rick Williamson stepped to the microphone launching the SCA's largest fund-raising project, the school-wide magazine sale. With each student expected to fulfill a small sales quota of two magazines, the week-long drive netted over $1000. Combined with the money obtained from the spring AFS week, the profit of the magazine sale was used by the Student Cooperative Association to sponsor club projects, to bring a foreign exchange student to Tucker, and to send a Tucker pupil abroad.

On the weekend of March 6-7, newly-elected SCA officers Mark Rubin, Sandie Clayman, and Johnny Bean attended the SCA Convention at J.E.B. Stuart High School in Falls Church, Virginia. By visiting study groups and roundtable discussions, the representatives were able to learn about the operation and fulfillment of their respective offices.

Before Christmas and in the spring, the National Honor Society conducted its annual tapping ceremonies. To be eligible for the NHS, exceptional juniors and seniors had to display outstanding ability in the areas of scholarship, leadership, service, and character.

A nationwide organization, the NHS is dedicated to the advancement of academics. Throughout the year, members participated in a tutoring program. Charging a fee of $1.50 per hour, members tutored the subjects in which they were most adept.

When spring arrived the Quill and Scroll tapped seven students who had demonstrated talent in literary fields by working on school publications. During the second semester, the Quill and Scroll publicized and coordinated the recruiting programs for the three publications' 1968-69 staffs.

Thespians initiate new chapter at Douglas Freeman

Early in the second semester, Thespians tapped new members in a surprise assembly. Pam Brooks, Eddie Denham, Clara Eggleston, Glenn McDearmon, Jeanne Olsen, Dennis Tosh, Paul Silver, and Barbara Weiss became members of the honorary dramatics society.

For the first time, the troupe sponsored a dramatic production. Picturing wartime Holland, the elaborate set provided a backdrop for The Diary of Anne Frank as the tear-evoking play about the survival of a Jewish family in Nazi-occupied Amsterdam ran for two nights in December.

"Funny Girl" provided another outlet for the creative abilities of Thespians as they headed various backstage crews. Members of both Thespians and Dramatics Club worked with hundreds of other students as assistant directors, stage managers, and musicians in the annual school musical.

Previously, nearby Douglas Freeman High School had no Thespian society. After planning and conferring for several weeks, the Tucker Thespians installed the new chapter and supervised the first tapping of the troupe.

The Dramatics Club pictured the bridal production number from "Funny Girl", "His Love Makes You Beautiful", in the Homecoming float. Riding the float, Nancy Jainchell, Janet Bell, Denise Bethel, and Lynne Salsbury portrayed the radiant brides from the Ziegfeld Follies to announce the title of the musical to the public.

After being displayed during the annual Thanksgiving assembly, the gifts were presented by members on behalf of the Tucker student body to the Crippled Children's Hospital, which is maintained by personal donations.

In order to develop a good moral character of its members, the club established a worthwhile project outside of school. Each month members selected a local church and attended Sunday worship services, alternating between the different denominations of the club members.

Key Club attends Capital District Convention in Baltimore

Famished after hours of work on his chemistry project, Mike Ribakov eyes a Butterfinger purchased from a Key Clubber.

"Understanding Through Involvement," the international theme of the Key Club, exemplified the activities of the school's chapter. Sacrificing Saturdays and school day afternoons, members worked on school and community projects. In the fall the club worked on a campus cleanup, straightening the library and classrooms and painting the parking lot. Sponsoring a school-wide drive, members donated money to the United Givers Fund and UNICEF, and presented toys and presents to the underprivileged children at the Bethlehem Center. To enable boys in the seventh through ninth grades and high school girls to join a service organization, the Key Club was the parent organization of the Jr. Service Club and the Keyettes. Throughout the year, the club cooperated with the West End Kiwanis Club and sent members to the meetings of other local Key Clubs. Members sent a monthly donation overseas to sponsor a young orphan in Taiwan. In the spring, sixteen Key Clubbers attended the Capital District Convention in Baltimore, where Al Gibson, endorsed for International Trustee at a division caucus, won a first place trophy in the oratorical contest. By visiting discussion groups and talking with Key Clubbers from Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia, members were able to exchange ideas and learn of the operations of other clubs.

Key Club forms new organizations: Keyettes, Junior Service

During the fall the Key Club organized two new service clubs: the Keyettes and the Junior Service Club.

Designed upon similar principles as the Key Club, tenth through twelfth grade girls were eligible for the Keyettes. With the assistance of Key Club advisors, the club participated in school and community projects, worked with underprivileged children at the Bethlehem Center, and cooperated with the Key Club on many of its regular service programs.

The Junior Service Club developed as a preparatory Key Club organization for boys in the seventh through the ninth grades. With funds raised by doughnut sales, the club worked on school and civic projects and participated in the school workday, cleaning restrooms and classrooms. In the spring members visited the residents of the Richmond Home for Ladies.

In the fall Key Club members established a preparatory organization, the Junior Service Club, upon similar principles as their own club. Teens instruct kindergarten class at Cerebral Palsy Center giving favors, decorated a Christmas tree, and delighted the children at Valentine's Day with candy favors.

In the fall the teens donned ragged clothes and industriously undertook the task of cleaning classrooms. Sparkling windows and scrubbed floors resulted after a hard workday.

Girls contribute Saturdays to Crippled Children's Hospital

Heartily attacking her job, Kristy Yount scrubs away pencil marks and blotches.

During the Christmas holidays Y-Teens ΔII decided to make favors for the patients at Crippled Children's Hospital. The girls, sweetheart Ricky Gulick, and big brother Ronnie Cherry used red felt and cotton to create Santa Clauses from baby food jars. The candy-filled trinkets delighted many of the patients on Christmas Day.

Later in the year the teens entertained at the Westport Manor nursing home. Accompanying themselves on guitar, the members sang folk songs and popular tunes to the elderly men and women. The experience proved beneficial to the students and the patients.

Bamboo curtains enhance Witness staff activity room

Furthering the work of the Pride Committee, Y-Teens Δ III sought to improve the appearance of Tucker's campus. The girls volunteered to hang curtains furnished by the yearbook staff in the activity room at the southern end of building seven. As the members put up the bamboo shades in their spare time, sore thumbs and crooked nails resulted. In spite of the pitfalls of overturned buckets and wet knees, the girls scrubbed windows and floors. In a spring picnic at a Bryan Park shelter, the girls enjoyed hamburgers, potato chips, lemonade, and marshmallows, climaxing a year of service.

Mr. Fred Dangerfield, the school community co-ordinator from Woodville Elementary School, spoke to the club on the problems of educating children from underprivileged areas. Soon after, the girls began to work with children at that school. The members gave a Christmas party and made stuffed animals for the children.

Debby Paulette and Kathleen Welshimer represented the Richmond area at the Tri-State Virginia-Carolinas Leadership Conference. The girls journeyed to Roanoke College at Salem for the week-long convention.

The girls held a candy sale and several bake sales to raise money for a plaque in memory of deceased faculty members. The plaque, displayed in the library, honored English teacher Mrs. Astrop and head librarian Mrs. Pollock.

During the winter months, students studied and discussed the works of the famous French writers Voltaire, Hugo, and Dumas. They also viewed color films on French explorers.

Through personal donations of members, the club continued its support of a fourteen year old French orphan, Monique Jacqueline Dupont, whom the club began financing in 1966.

During a Language Day assembly rehearsal, director Gail Silver and German Club President Eddie Denham, substituting for French Club representative Kathleen Welshimer, practice the speech prepared by club members for the assembly.

At Homecoming the German Club float, representing a World War I dogfight culminating in the explosive destruction of a villainous George Wythe Fokker by a superior Tucker aircraft, won a second-place award.

Strengthening the organization's treasury through the sale of school pins, German students used the profit from the campaign to purchase books and recordings by famous German authors and composers. Club attends Virginia Junior Classical League Conference

Traveling to Charlottesville, Latin Club members attended the annual Junior Classical League Conference at the University of Virginia. Through programs consisting of club skits, slides and cartoons by Dr. Graves Thompson, Latin professor at Hampden-Sydney, club members studied the ancient civilization of the Roman people.

During the winter months the club invited several speakers, among them a professor at the University of Richmond, Professor Stuart Wheeler, who spoke on the excavation of the ancient city of Troy, and Dr. Talbot Selby, also from the University of Richmond, who discussed the works of the classicist Vergil.

With money raised from bakesales, the club sponsored the Spring Roman Banquet in April for Latin students and faculty members.

Latin Club members listen attentively during a winter meeting as President Alice Burkett discusses business matters concerning the club's latest fund-raising project, a bakesale.

Amateur radio operator lectures on unique experience

During October Spanish students had the rare privilege to meet Dr. Robert Eshelman, an expert radio operator who had had a very unique experience. At a club meeting, Dr. Eshelman spoke about his radio expedition into the mysterious country of Río de Oro, Spanish Sahara, a remote Spanish possession located off the coast of Spain. The only American tourist ever to legally enter the country, Eshelman arrived from the Canary Islands after months of planning in collaboration with the Spanish Foreign Legion. While stationed there, Eshelman studied the people, their way of living, and the native culture.

During the Christmas season the club sponsored its annual Christmas party, in which members and guests, among them Monica Polapi, a foreign exchange student from Brazil, joined in the fun and refreshment in a Spanish setting.

At the annual Spanish Club banquet first and second year students took part in a take-off on Rowan and Martin's "Laugh-In". Spanish music and cuisine added to the atmosphere of "Spring in Mexico", as costumed waiters served tortillas and pumpkin seeds as the sounds of Herb Alpert filled the cafeteria.

Art Club sponsors decorating contest for holiday season

"Six geese a-laying, five golden rings, four calling birds . . ." On the long thin office windows, colorful scenes depicting the traditional English carol, "The Twelve Days of Christmas," greeted those entering the office.

The club sponsored a yuletide door decorating contest. A large gift box covered with red and gold wrapping paper and adorned with sprays of pine and holly won the five dollar first prize for Mrs. Harrod's senior homeroom.

The Art Club's Homecoming float, featuring a towering daisy in a flower power theme, took a third place prize.

"Quiet on the set! On the air!" shot across the set as members of the Photography Club toured the studio of WRVA television station, carefully inspecting expensive color cameras and lenses. Curiously, the members inquired of the technicians on photography techniques.

Norman Kirshbaum, head photographer at the Photo Reflex Studio at Thalhimers, instructed the members on the proper use of equipment and offered many enlightening tips for shutterbugs.

Club members also visited the photography labs at Galeski Photo Studio and Richmond Newspapers, Incorporated, where they saw the film development of Associated Press wirephotos.

For the second straight year the chess team, through continual practice of new movements and techniques, maintained an unblemished record of no defeats. Moving decisively through the battlefields of Douglas Freeman, George Wythe, Hermitage, Thomas Jefferson, and Collegiate, the five-man team, composed of Harvey Vines, Blake Morris, Helen Schiffman, Glenn Watson, and Keith Fogg ruthlessly routed the inferior enemy. They then entered the area chess tournament finals, where the team overwhelmingly defeated other local scholastic teams en route to posting a first place position among area schools.

In winter FBLA members enlarged the treasury by selling Tiger key chains during school hours. The profit obtained from the sale's drive was used to finance the club's various service projects.

For Valentine's Day, members constructed placemats and favors for the patients at Crippled Children's Hospital and visited and worked with the children, helping in therapy and in raising spirits.

The club planned programs in which members would personally benefit. Business executives, white collar workers, and secretaries from local commercial offices and factories discussed with members their particular occupations and the world of business and management. By conversing with guests, members were able to learn from experts about the field in which they hoped to enter.

FHA welcomes parents, faculty with hot coffee

Donning aprons, members of the Future Homemakers of America served steaming coffee and warm doughnuts to parents and faculty on the first Parent Visitation Day as the crisp October weather drew many customers to the club's stand.

Cookbooks sold by the girls offered many delicious ideas. The collections of dessert or main dish recipes made useful Christmas gifts.

Continuing an FHA tradition, the girls decorated a Christmas tree for the lobby of the office. Red felt bows and icicles of white pearl buttons adorned the artificial green fir which provided an air of Christmas cheer.

"Would you like to buy a poundcake?" This was a familiar cry of Future Teachers of America as they sold glazed poundcakes to the students and faculty before the Christmas holidays. After taking orders, the members baked the cakes at home, then delivered them to buyers during homeroom.

Foreign exchange student Nick Battye spoke on the school system in Australia, where potential teachers who wish to teach in the state school system need an education similar to that required in the United States. Nick explained that all teachers must have either a teacher's college diploma or a degree from a university.

History Club members view classic film of Civil War, "Gone With the Wind"

The past vividly returned as the History Club toured the Civil War Park at Petersburg, Virginia. Appomattox Manor, Blanford Church, and the Crater provided a path into yester-year during the September excursion. Also on a historical tour members enjoyed peaceful drives along Duke of Gloucester Street in horse-drawn carriages as they toured Colonial Williamsburg in the spring. During the day they visited the Capitol, the residence of early Virginia governors, the gaol, where prisoners were lodged, and the powder magazine.

The club diligently hunted through voluminous county records and files searching for information on the history of the Tuckahoe district of Henrico county. Members explored the banks of the James River looking for remains of the locks once used in the canal.

At the Mariner's Museum in Norfolk, ancient relics of the sea greeted the tourists as they browsed among old figureheads and worn sea chests. The members saw a display of rowboats, dinghies, and other small crafts. In MacArthur's Memorial, also in Norfolk, the group inspected sets of silver, two huge Chinese vases, given to MacArthur by Oriental friends, and two Japanese suits of armor fashioned from straw. On display were the general's old hat, gun, corncob pipe, and thirty-third degree Masonic ring.

ICT makes slogan ribbons for fall, winter athletics

Using a silk screen process, members of Industrial Cooperative Training fashioned slogan ribbons from yards of fabric and cans of blue and orange paint. Sold by the varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders, the ribbons promoted school spirit before each football and basketball game and helped finance the chartered bus trips to and from away games.

The first place prize for a float in the Homecoming parade supplemented the treasury. A small stuffed bulldog, astride a simulated rocket, towered above representative Lynn Cashman and chauffeur Steve Pitt. Representing the winning float, Lynn became a member of the queen's court at the Homecoming dance the next night.

Harvard professor surveys O'Neill's Morning of the Electra

Comprising a student discussion group, Nancy Jainchell, Kathleen Welshimer, Helen Schiffman analyze Aldous Huxley's contemporary novel of future life, Brave New World. Book reviews by professors and teachers and panel discussions by students on famous writings are characteristic activities of regular Literary Club programs.

Devoted to the field of world literature and the arts, Literary Club scholars examined the wealth of local museums, universities, theaters, and the criticisms of experts on famous masterpieces. Teachers and students studied book reviews of Lord of the Flies, given by English teacher William Caldwell; O'Neill's Morning of the Electra, reviewed by Dr. Irving White, Professor of Classics at Harvard; The Agony and the Ecstasy, presented by Ulrich Trebskoy, President of the American Press Women's Association; and Huxley's Brave New World, discussed by a student panel.

Interested in the arts as well as literature, members explored art galleries of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, viewed ballets by the American Theatre Ballet Company at the Mosque, and attended award-winning performances of Taming of the Shrew, Camelot, and Becket at various Richmond movie theaters.

Working in the gym, Mike Snavely, Ronnie Pritchett, and Dennis Chappell complete construction of a white picket fence designed to shelter grass at sidewalk corners.

Sportsmen exhibit Tiger enthusiasm by school service

The humming of tools drifted through the auxiliary gym as sportsmen hammered away at narrow pine timbers. Exhibiting pride by beautifying the campus, Coach McDonough and his athletes dedicated their activities to a school service theme. In February members vigorously labored to build white picket fences which, placed at the corners of the sidewalks between the gym and administration buildings, protected the grass trampled by hoards of students hurrying to classes and assemblies.

Operating its coat check and post-game sock-hops at basketball games, the club raised money to buy a football reaction machine and a basketball rebounding machine.

In the spring the lettermen voted to give the most school spirited teacher of the year award to Miss Miller and Mr. Stamback.

Pep Club receives appreciative plaque from Cross Country

Nancy Bloch, Marcy Bloch, and Judy Silver vie for Haxall Ward's attention as they attempt to sell her a Tiger pennant.

Recognizing the Cross-Country team for its near-perfect record, the Pep Club held a surprise pep rally commending each runner for his effort in winning the state cross-country championship for the second year in a row. In a later pep rally Barry Shiflett thanked the club with a plaque signed by each member in appreciation of its support during the season. The plaque, displayed in the art window in Building I, included a sketch of a roadrunner, the emblem of the team.

Further backing the athletic department, the members found themselves spattered with paint as they drew the long banners displayed at each football game where they also sold candy for the Athletic Boosters' Club. To lure more students to sporting functions, the members placed a schedule of the games and meets in a window of building six. The Pep Club also painted signs congratulating the High School Bowl team for its victory over Hermitage in the first of four appearances on the WRVA television program.

Electronics enthusiasts engineer broadcast complex in cafeterias, radio room

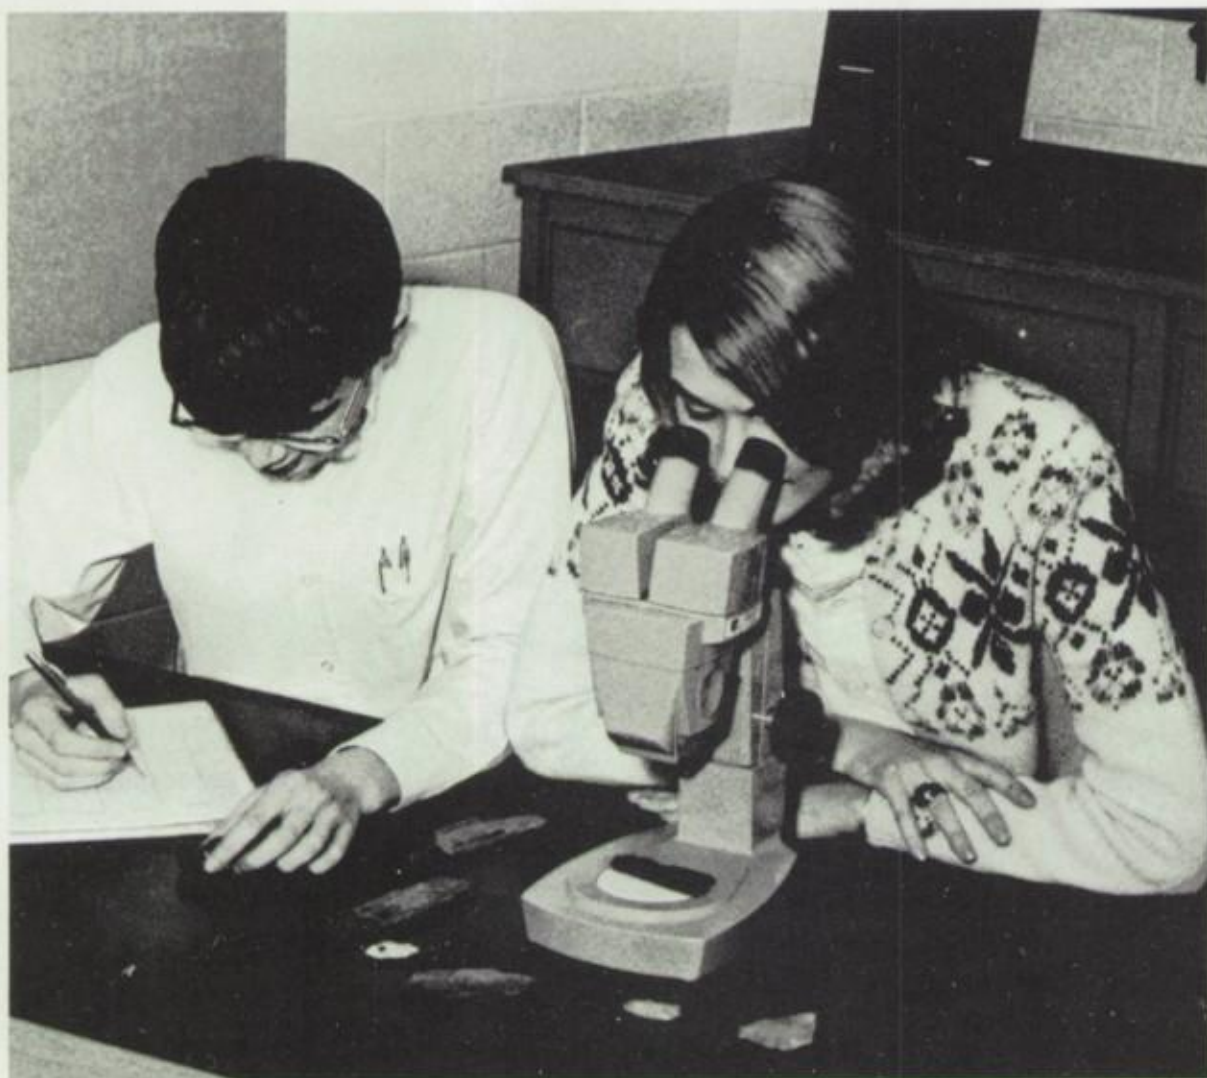

Amidst the static of shifting frequencies and the blur of whirring dials on his HAM transmitter, Johnny Bean contacts station WN42PC in North Norwick, New York.

With a difficult rebuilding program, dedicated determination, and diverse fund-raising activities, the Radio-Electronics Club purchased new equipment and broadened its activities. Expanding into the field of television, the organization toured various local radio and television stations, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company and the Norfolk Naval Base.

Valuable information concerning the operation of a radio station obtained on the trips aided in the construction of a broadcasting studio. With amplifiers in cafeterias and a hookup from the school radio room, JRT disc jockeys transmitted programs of popular music, announcements, and campus news for students during lunch periods.

Fossil-hunting aids amateur scientists in study of prehistory

After a fossil expedition, John Angle and Kathleen Welshimer examine microscopic cross-sections of petrified wood specimens excavated at Westmoreland Park.

The earth trembled as the massive reptilian monsters, Tyrannosaurus Rex and Triceratops, clashed ferociously in a setting of erupting volcanoes and giant ferns. In early spring, Science Club members, with a little imagination, relived Mesozoic history while fossil hunting in Westmoreland Park on the Potomac River and rock collecting in Amelia County. Observant searchers located samples and, bringing them back to the laboratory, analyzed them for their paleontological importance.

Eager to discover the career opportunities available in science, enthusiastic members took field trips to Byrd Field, Texaco Refining Company, and Philip Morris Research Center where they talked with technicians, chemists, and communications engineers.

Gavel earns first place rating at southern press convention

With a deadline approaching, Cathy Giles makes final changes on a galley proof.

Enveloped in a state of panic, the room was in chaos as reporters rushed in urgency. Typists struggled desperately under the load of incoming material while, on one side of the room, the business manager hounded the staff for advertisements. This was the Gavel study hall.

Moving unnoticed behind the scenes, the staff constructed bits of campus news into an informative study of student life. Judged at the annual Southern Inter-scholastic Press Association in Lexington, Virginia, the newspaper received a first-class rating.

When SCA elections were held, the Gavel initiated Tucker's first press conference. By shooting informal questions at the respective candidates, the conference took the place of the usual campaign speeches. Spur-of-the-moment answers informed students of the candidates' opinions on issues.

Deciding on the layout design of future issues, sports editor Gary Jacobson and Mrs. Phillips study a printed copy of a Gavel spread.

Hearing enlarges quantity, area of magazine's pages

The literary magazine, published in the winter and spring, enlarged its page size. The staff collected essays, short stories, and poems hoping later to add reviews of plays and books.

On the Lexington campus of Washington and Lee University, Diane Bates represented the Hearing at the Southern Interscholastic Press Association. The magazine received eight hundred and ten points out of a possible one thousand, entitling it to a second-place honor award.

The publication enlisted student artists for illustrations and cover designs. Members of the staff did not know the authors of the entries until they had been selected for publication.

Pouring over jumbled sheets of paper, Kitti Carter proof-reads copy fitting sheets.

University size Witness provides added variation

At the National Scholastic Press Association, the Witness came within fifty points of the seven thousand needed to be called an All-American yearbook. The 1967 publication received the first class award.

Several members attended an Inter-Collegiate Press forum, designed to aid yearbook workers. The conference offered useful tips on layout design, headline placement, and construction of captions and cutlines. Miss Marian Breedon, advisor to the staff of the Historian, Douglas Freeman's yearbook, spoke on problems encountered in yearbook production and ways of solving them.

As well as increasing the number of pages, the Witness expanded to a university size yearbook, allowing more freedom for an effective format.

Band performs at University of Richmond's Homecoming

Sweeping the crowd into the rousing tempo of its music, the pep band instilled Tiger spirit and a sense of pride at pep rallies and pride assemblies.

Cooperating with the choral department, the concert band provided the music for the spring musical production of "Funny Girl," as two nights a week the musicians swung out on the blaring ragtime of the First World War. On a March Saturday the band participated in the Spring Band Festival at Douglas Freeman, receiving a high two rating for very difficult grade-six music.

During the fall, the marching band, under the leadership of director Richard Thier, produced lively half-time shows at home football games. Winning awards at the Tuckahoe Rescue Squad Parade and the Chesterfield Fireman Parade, the band also competed in the Winchester Apple Blossom Festival and the University of Richmond Homecoming.

Framed in the void of autumn blackness, five solitary drummers march in formation during halftime at Homecoming.

Marching squads dedicate Parham Rd.-64 Interchange

Starting off an active year, the pom pom girls and majorettes marched in the Tuckahoe Rescue Squad Parade, held at the kick-off of the squad's fund-raising drive. After receiving second place in the Ashland Rescue Squad Parade and in the Chesterfield Volunteer Fireman's Parade, the two marching units performed in the University of Richmond's Homecoming parade and half time. As the yuletide season approached, the girls participated in the Thalhimer's Toy Parade and the Petersburg Christmas Parade, and after Easter, marched in the Winchester Apple Blossom Festival Parade.

Colorful Christmas outfits brightened the cold, crisp day and bells jingled merrily on boots as the groups participated in the consecration of the new sanitation system on Willow Lawn Drive. In the dedication ceremonies opening the Parham Road-Interstate 64 Interchange, head majorette Kathy Fisher and head pom pom girl Bee Jay Redford cut the ribbon.

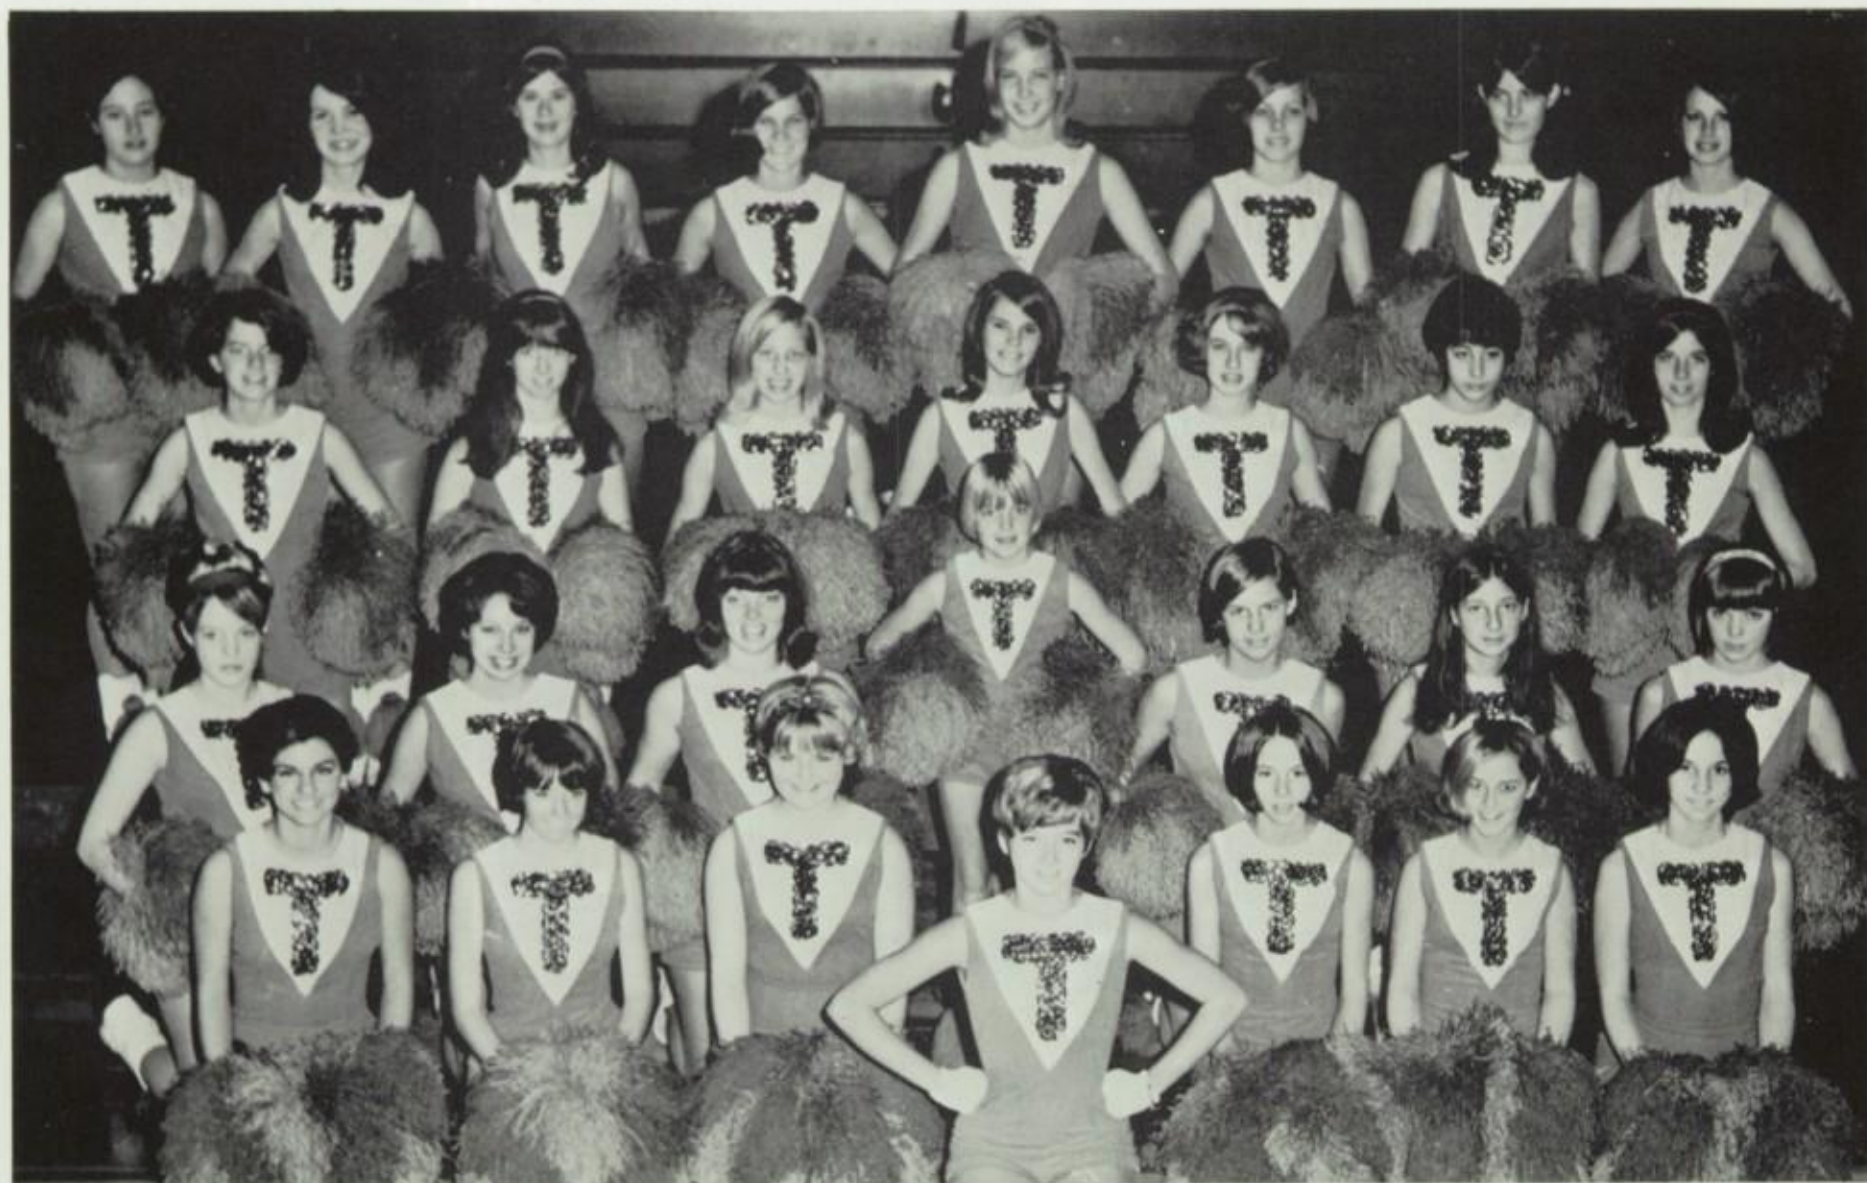

After deciding to recognize a senior football player for his school spirit, the pom pom girls questioned team members and coaches for suggestions. The player named most often, Donnie Walsh, received the plaque from the girls in the annual athletic awards assembly.

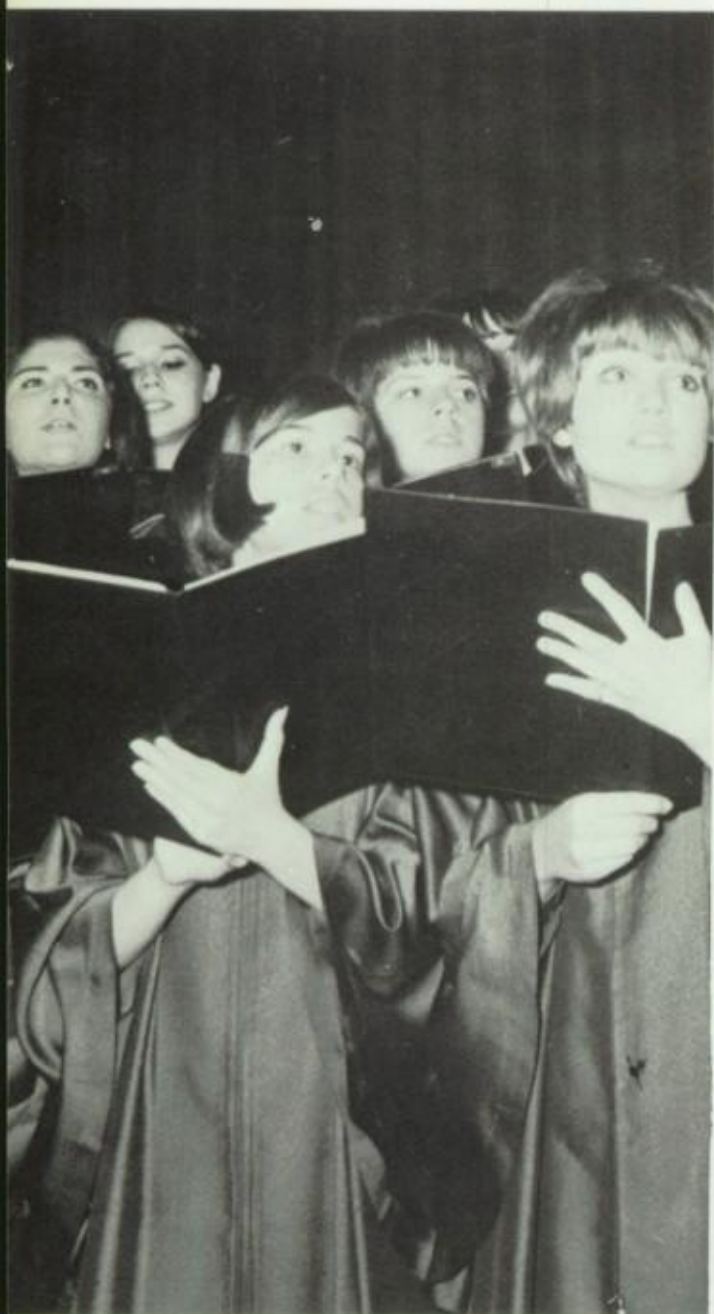

Strains of the hit tune "More" echo throughout the gymnasium as the pom pom girls enliven an autumn pep rally, linking arms in a bouncy show of enthusiasm and rhythm.

A music staff, dotted with several girls of the chorus as notes, embellished the vocal music department's Homecoming float. Joseph Haydn's famed "The Heavens Are Telling" sounded from a tape recording as the parade moved around the field.

Appearing in autumn, the Concert Choral Group performed throughout the community as the vocalists entertained at meetings of the Westhampton Junior Woman's Club, the Westwood Woman's Club, and at a fellowship dinner at Sunset Hills Baptist Church.

Young team gains experience despite unsuccessful record

Flanking an end sweep, Ricky Bradley checks Thomas Jefferson for short yardage.

Before the snap, Tucker's defensive line readies to smash John Marshall's forward wall.

Using many sophomores and freshmen who would normally play on the junior varsity squad, the varsity team suffered from inexperience. The season did, however, train the young players for future seasons on the varsity squad.

Against John Marshall, despite an interception which led to the Tigers' first score of the season, mistakes cost the contest in the second half. The defense held against Freeman's ground game, but the weak spot was pass defense. Tucker scored on Rick Bradley's 60-yard bomb to Donnie Walsh, but an interception in the second quarter snapped the resurgence.

Tigers down Benedictine with thirty-three point volley

Tucker exploded against Benedictine by scoring thirty-three points in thirteen minutes. The downpour during the game with Thomas Jefferson held up the offense, but the Tiger punt defense set up a score by downing the ball on Teejay's four yard line.

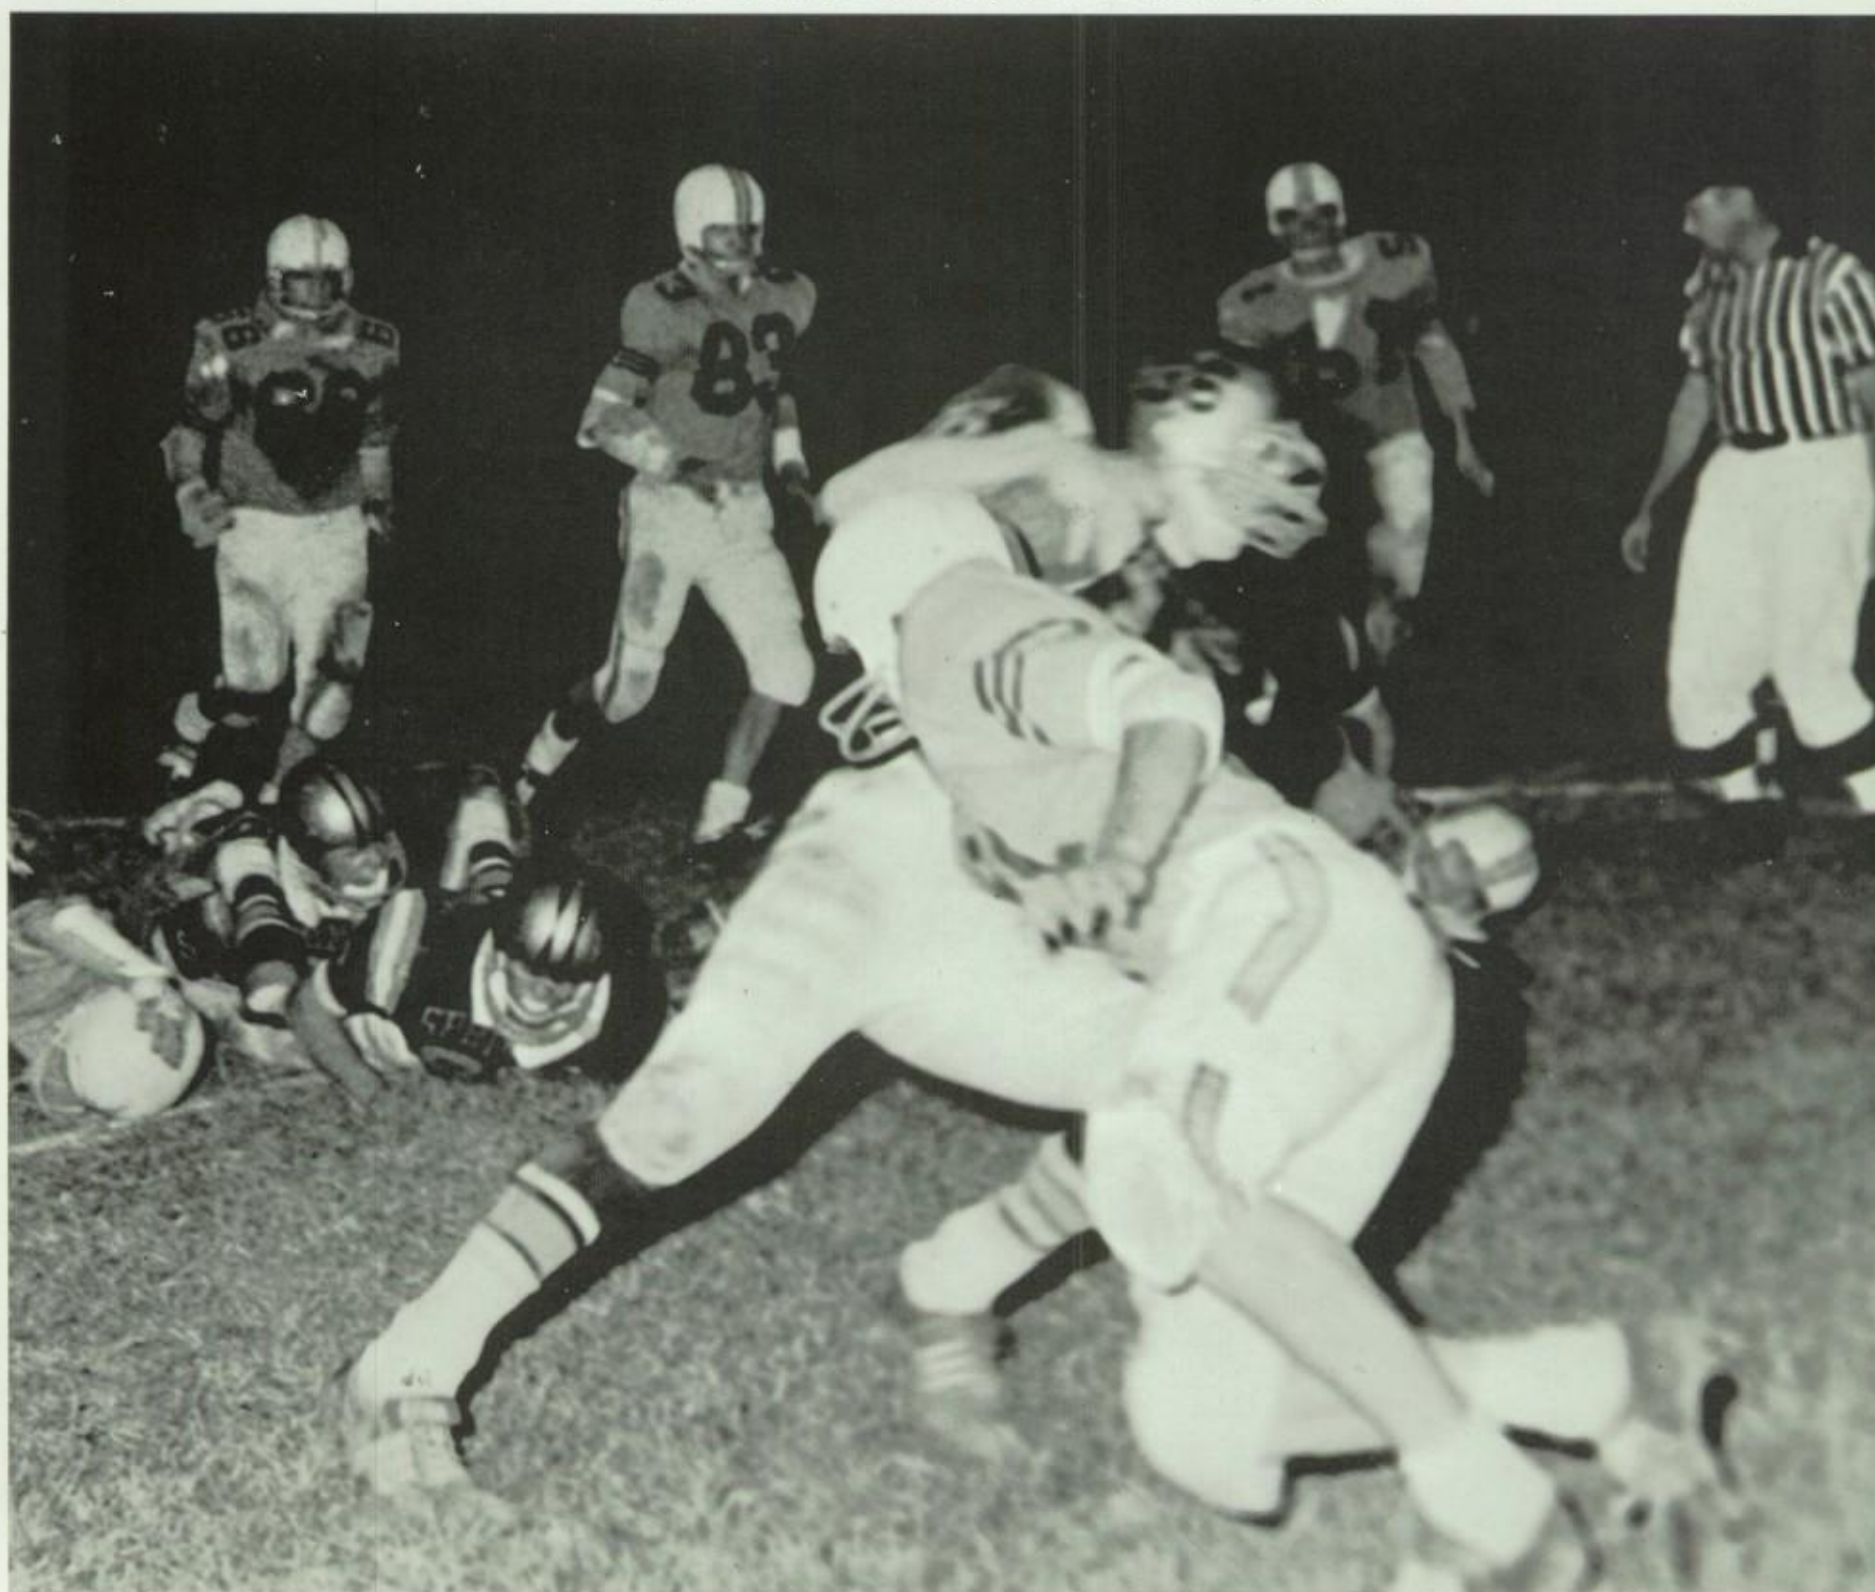

Henrico's strong offense in a crushing second half cancelled Ernie Vincent's passing gain of 202 yards. Capitalizing on Tucker's mistakes, the Panthers swept the Tiger ground defense. A strong combination of rushing and passing gave Highland Springs a strong lead which the Tiger defense controlled in a second half rally. Vincent carried the ball in from the one-yard line for the lone Tucker score. The season tally showed a one-win, nine-loss record.

JV football team gains experience under Coach Sweeney

In a punting situation Charles Crosby prepares to power the ball out of home territory.

Inexperience and injuries plagued the junior varsity team during their five-game season. The loss of experienced sophomores to the varsity squad forced the J.V. gridders to fill team positions with eighth and ninth graders.

In the opener the Varina defense held the Tigers until they reverted to the end sweep late in the game. Intercepted passes and a strong rush by the Freeman line stopped the team's drives against the Rebels. Capitalizing on injuries, Teejay used end sweeps to gain yardage although the Tucker pass defense kept the Jeffs on the ground. Late-season tilts against John Marshall and Henrico saw the Justices and Warriors victorious.

As the Tiger defensive line holds back an onslaught of Blue Devils, quarterback Dan Lynch fades back for a pass. A broken collar bone later in the season sidelined Lynch and held up the Tigers' passing gain against Thomas Jefferson and John Marshall.

Undefeated harriers take 2nd consecutive state title

The Cross Country team repeated their stellar performance of last year to again win the state championship. The victory followed on the heels of perfect tallies against Colonial Heights and Douglas Freeman where the team amassed scores of 50-15. Later Henrico fell to the Tiger harriers. Against Thomas Jefferson the Tigers dominated in an 18-44 decision. They then went to the University of Richmond where the team successfully defended its district and regional titles.

The season's climax came at the state championship meet in November. The Dunbar Farms course was the site as the runners captured first place. Barry Shiflett led the Tigers and was tenth among all entrants.

Coach John Irby presented the team's newest trophy to Mr. Doyle at a pep rally. Former Tucker cross country star Fred Guest congratulated the team before an enthusiastic student body which saluted the runner's perfect season.

Henley, Malone, Lipes, and Vincent average double-figure season tally

For Tucker's varsity basketball team, the half was the hinge of every game. The Tigers nearly always went to the dressing room at half time either with the lead or in strong contention. Whenever they could continue their strong play in the third quarter, they won. Returning for the final halves, the players usually lacked the momentum to carry a victory. With a lack of depth, Tucker found the opponents' stamina overwhelming in game after game.

Opening against Highland Springs, the Tigers matched the Springers shot for shot before mistakes cost them a victory. Trailing Benedictine, the Tigers roared back in the third period for their first win. Winning six contests, the squad relied on the experience of veteran cagers.

Tigers snatch two upsets from State Catholic Champs

Against undefeated Douglas Freeman, Tucker led at the half before falling behind in the third period. Lane fell to a balanced Tiger offense. A Henrico field goal at the final buzzer gave the Warriors a two-point victory.

Tucker handed an improved Lane squad another defeat. Ernie Vincent sank a jumper with two seconds remaining to save a come-from-behind win over Thomas Jefferson. Russ Malone hit a season-high 30 points to avenge an earlier defeat by the Jeffs. A loss to George Wythe slowed their momentum, but the Tigers came back to pin a defeat on Benedictine.

Opening the season against Highland Springs, the Junior Varsity showed surprising overall strength in an easy win. Wilson Cunningham and Jen Connell picked the backboards clean as the Tigers gathered in 51 rebounds. Against John Marshall, defense proved the Tigers' undoing. The Justices ran through Tucker's man-to-man defense and squeezed a one-point victory.

Despite a season's high 31 points from leading scorer Rick Jacobson, fourth quarter heroics by Hermitage gave the Panthers a victory by three points.

As the season progressed the cagers lost to overcoming offense. Falling before 15 opponents, they toppled only Highland Springs, Hermitage and Benedictine.

Consistent scoring balance and a steady defense took the ninth grade cagers to their best record in school history. Defeating Lee Davis in their first game, the Tigers showed overall strength that characterized the season. Ball control paid off as the Tigers dealt St. Christopher's a one-point loss. Again toppling the Confederates, the team amounted a four game winning streak.

Putting two men in double figures, the eighth grade squad topped Midlothian. In overtime the team snatched a victory from Fairfield and later dealt a defeat to Henrico. Carrying away only five encounters, the cagers dropped before eight rivals to finish a losing season.

Fouled on the play, Wayne Williams outjumps a defender to bank the ball for two.

Portraying the results of a Tiger football attack, the varsity cheerleaders presented amusing skits in the fall pep rallies. In an effort to improve spirit, the squad enlisted the Varsity football players as the new cheerleaders. The strangely arrayed boys shouted cheers amid fits of laughter from the stands.

Feminine cagers select Pam Gittings as most valuable player

Conferring with the scorer, the Tigresses review the first half and plan their strategy.

In the season's opener Varina outscored the feminine cagers. The squad then bowed to Henrico, undefeated for the past two years. Freeman then tilted the girls in a smashing defeat. In the closing moments of a later game, Highland Springs scored eleven points to overcome the 'Tigers' advantage. They dropped one more to Hermitage and closed the year with a loss to Highland Springs.

With low scores, the girls tallied defeats at the hands of every opponent and closed a winless season.

At the Sports Awards Assembly the team honored outstanding teammates. Pam Gittings received a trophy for the most valuable player and Joan Hyman accepted the sportsmanship award.

Tucker basemen complete record with 5-9 season

Firing the team to a winning season, lettermen pitchers sparked the defense. With Ernie Vincent and Kenny Roberts starting and Steve Whitten as a reliever, the three-man battery proved to be one of the tightest in the district. Three times the hurlers shut out the competition's hitters once against George Wythe and twice against Thomas Jefferson.

Downing two of the league's toughest teams, George Wythe and Hermitage, the Tigers capitalized on pitching and a practiced outfield comprised of Rick Bradley, Steve Whitten, and Kenny Roberts.

Launching the year, the players shut out the Bulldogs 2-0, but bowed before Douglas Freeman. Through the encounters with the area squads, errors cost runs and games such as the contest with the Panthers. Backed by small crowds, the Tigers strung together a string of five triumphs after a series of four forfeits.

Inexperienced pitching, new team cost junior varsity sluggers 7 of 10 games

Tucker's junior varsity baseball team was at a disadvantage before the season opened. Only five players returned from last year's squad, and no experienced pitchers remained for the team.

The team started the season with a losing effort against Douglas Freeman on the home field. The inexperienced pitching cost the game as five Tigers saw action on the mound. Although the team committed only two errors in the field, the Rebels' superior batting swamped the Tigers, who came out on the short end of a 15-5 decision.

Tucker surged in the second game to a 15-2 victory over Collegiate. Garland Isaacs and Jay Barden took over the pitching duties and also led the batting along with Ken Lancaster. In all, the Tigers had seventeen hits, and the field had no errors.

The Tigers managed to beat Thomas Jefferson by the convincing score of 8 to 3, but the Blue Devils clipped the team in the following game by 5-4. Again Collegiate went down to a heavy loss as Tucker beat them in a 7-0 decision.

In the last three games the opponents' heavy hitting against the Tiger weak pitching crushed all hopes of victory. Only against Highland Springs did the players near a win as a comeback surge turned into a shallow defeat.

Counselors utilize Differential Aptitude Tests to find abilities of eighth graders

A sheet of white paper covered with neat brown-edged circles, scratch paper, two number-two pencils, and an eraser typified the Differential Aptitude Tests as four hundred eighth graders agonized over them for a week. Quizzing students for both verbal and mechanical abilities, the test devoted a different section to each topic. With a choice of four possible answers, pupils blackened in the circles corresponding to their answers. The Differential Aptitude Tests help determine the abilities of the students and thus provided useful information to use when applying for college admission. Contacting parents, the counselors called them to the guidance office to explain the results and importance of the test given.

Council holds brainstorming session to gather fund-raising ideas for freshmen

A brainstorming session held in the fall provided the Freshman Class and the faculty advisors with many useful ideas for the year. SCA Vice President Mark Rubin addressed the fund-raising meeting about accumulating funds early for their future Junior-Senior Prom.

Ideas brought up during the open floor meeting included a raffle which would entitle the winner to his choice of either a live puppy or a gift certificate. The more industrious members felt that a Saturday car wash offered a money-making opportunity. Encountering unforeseen difficulties due to a school board regulation, they had to postpone the projects.

Apricot - centered daisies line walls at "Why Not?"

"Why not?" increased the class treasury by almost $100. Huge multi-colored daisies hung from the walls and crepe paper of vivid reds, blues, yellows, and greens draped across the ceiling accentuated the psychedelic atmosphere. The dance featured the soul sound of "The Ordains."

Another project that helped increase the treasury, the sophomore class showed a Hollywood movie, "The Fat Spy." A full length color production, the film starred Jayne Mansfield and Phyllis Diller.

The Class of '70 marked the end of the five-year contract with Josten's. A delegate from each of the ten homerooms met to decide on the company receiving the new contract. After three meetings with the principal and representatives of five ring companies, the committee voted. Acting on the council's decision, Mr. Doyle signed a three year contract with Dieges and Clust, who, beginning next year, will make the rings.

Junior class earns wealthiest coffer in school's history

A jug of moonshine, an authentic still, giant caricatures of Daisy Mae and Li'l Abner, and a multitude of shmooes transformed the setting of the gym from a basketball court to Dogpatch, USA. The Sadie Hawkins Day dance, sponsored for the first time by the Junior Class, featured the soul music of the Jokers Wild. For those who wanted to "get hitched," "two bits" entitled an eager young couple to the services of "Marryin' Sam" (Coach McDonough), a useless marriage license, and a chicken band ring. A twenty-five cent raffle paid off one-hundred fold for Jerry Adolph in the form of a gift certificate to the store of his choice, and Greg Lipes and Chris Daniel were chosen as honorary Li'l Abner and Daisy Mae. Net profit exceeded eleven hundred dollars.

Class of '68 marks first to finish six years at Tucker

Being the first to complete the full six years of study at Tucker and the first to host a foreign exchange student, this year's graduating class marked a milestone in the school's growth. Work on the Senior Lounge proved worthwhile when the room became useful for relaxing and socializing. To show off the new abode, the seniors held an "open house" for the faculty and another for juniors.

True senior spirit, boosted by the Senior bell, rang forth at every pep rally and game from the Senior section. At graduation the Seniors passed the bell on to the Class of '69 to begin a tradition to be followed by future senior classes.

As well as collecting toys at Christmas for the Grace Arent's School, the class donated to the AFS fund and the Astrop Memorial, bought American flags for classrooms, and backdrops for graduation.

In the "soulful" manner of the Class of '68, the seniors chose the Soul Tramps to play for the prom and the breakfast at the Satellite Club. Senior Week at the end of school topped off the year giving the Seniors the extra privileges of leaving early for class and holding a dress-up day. Baccalaureate, Class Night, and the Senior Picnic were preludes to Friday's commencement exercises.

Luck came to the Senior Class when the completion of the new building left two empty locker rooms in Cafeteria III. After consultation with Mr. Doyle, President Gary Jacobson and the Senior Class Council began planning the lounge. Henrico County assisted by sending workers to break down the middle wall, leaving one large room. Next the Senior Class joined in to clean up, paint, move furniture, and decorate. At last the Senior lounge serves as a place for Seniors to gather before and after school and during lunch, a room which will become more useful through later senior classes.

Australian Nick Battye promotes internationalism

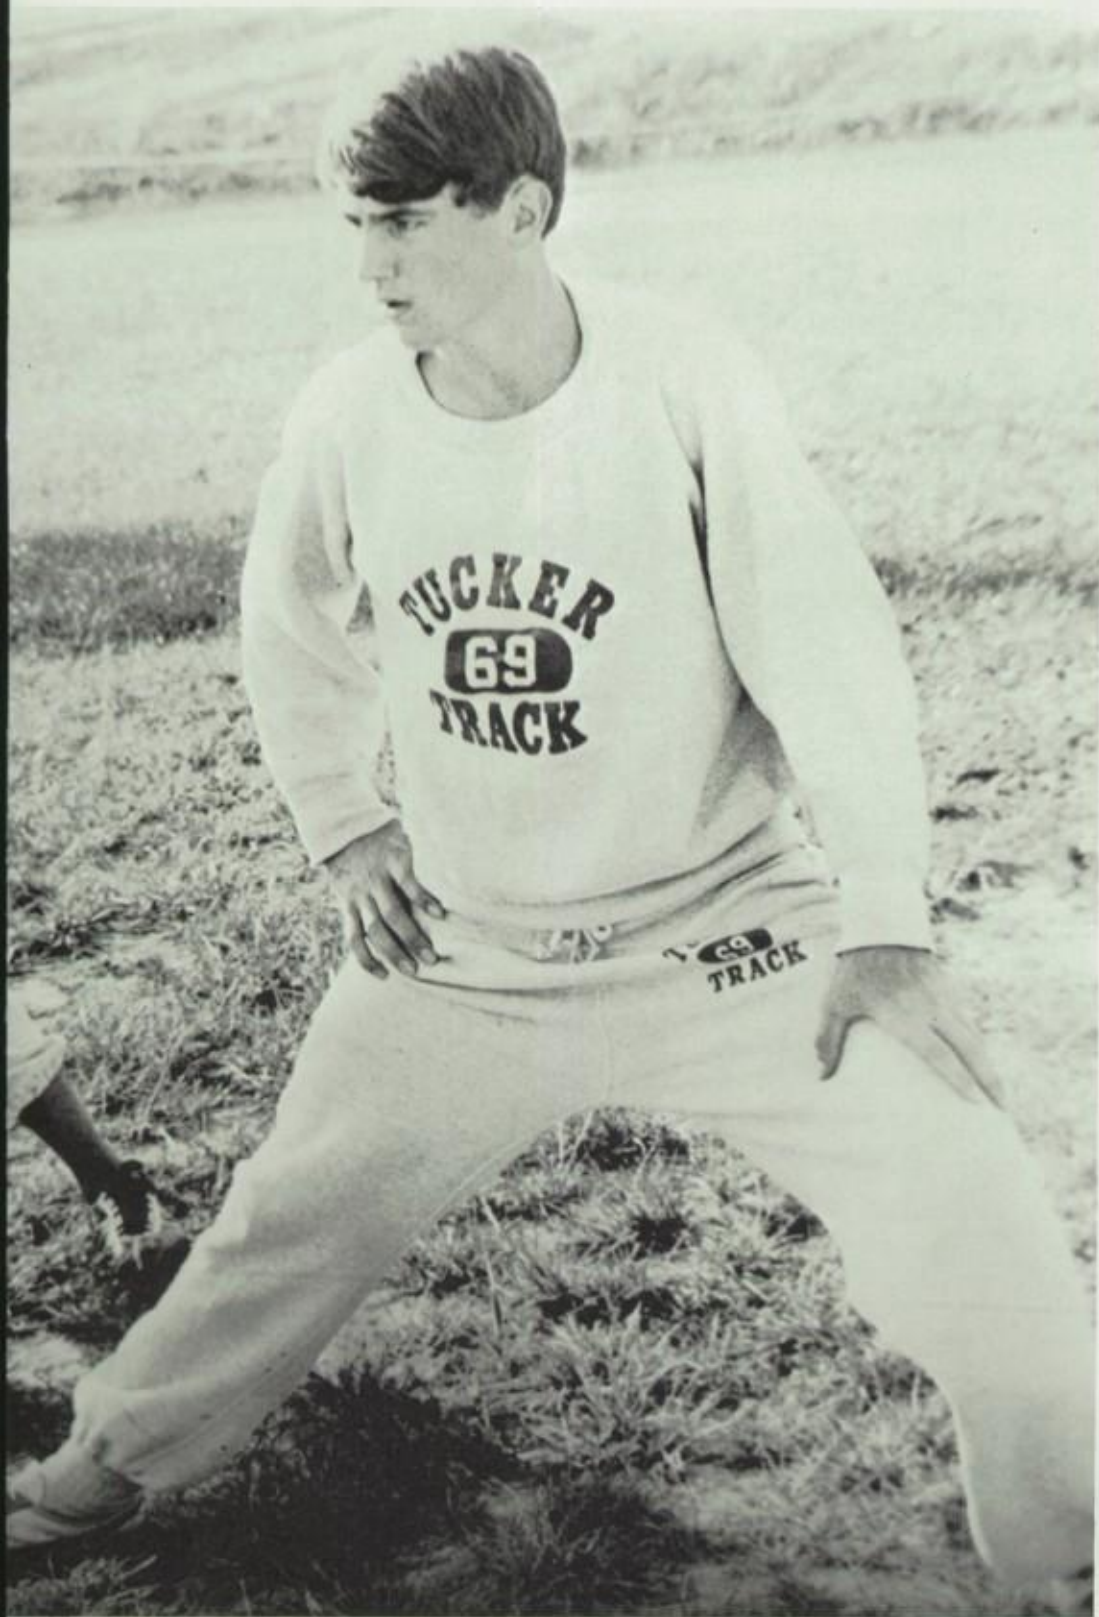

Leaving Australia by chartered plane, Nick Battye, Tucker's first foreign exchange student, stopped in New Zealand, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Las Vegas, Chicago, and Washington before arriving in Richmond. Hosted by the family of Rick Williamson, Nick appreciated his warm welcome in Richmond, especially at Tucker. During the year, Nick's schedule included world literature, English, government, drama, and art. Nick ran cross country and played the part of Tom Keeny in "Funny Girl." He also took part in the Variety Show and helped with the literary areas of the Hearing and the Witness.

Placing first in the Forensic district championship of boy's poetry, Nick went on to win second place in the state championship reading, "The Hollow Men" by T. S. Eliot. As a member of the Key Club, he attended the Capital District Convention in Baltimore, Maryland. Nick was also a member of the Senior Court at the Prom.

Known as "the bloke", Nick considers his stay in the U.S. one of the most valuable experiences of his life as well as one promoting understanding between nations. Everyone who knew Nick agreed that he was an extremely interesting person with his own philosophies of life and was an asset to Tucker this year.

Mr. Montecalvo produces a tantalizing Italian Kitchen pizza.

Pizzas with pepperoni, sausage anchovies, or green peppers tantalize and please customers at Italian Kitchen West. Strands of thin spaghetti, cooked to a delectable degree of flavor, smothered with an appetizing homemade Italian sauce and sprinkled with Parmesan or Mozzarella cheese, make up the main course of a mouth-watering meal. A Greek salad of crisp lettuce, aged cheese and ripe olives, provides just the right side dish. Freshly baked, garlic scented bread directly from the oven tops off this dinner of perfection.

Red and white checked tableclothes and murals reminiscent of Italy, create an atmosphere of true Old World quaintness. The Italian charm, accentuated by candlelight and wine, transports customers to the dining room of the signore in Roma. The total effect of this haven for Italian connoisseurs creates an evening of delightful dining.

For those hectic days when there is no time to fix dinner, the Kitchen's convenient carry-out service enables patrons to enjoy a real Italian dinner in the comfort of their own homes. It takes only a phone call and a few minutes' wait to have a pizza made to individual tastes, and the convenient location enables customers to have pizza hot-from-the "Kitchen" upon arriving home after supporting your team at a football or a basketball game.

ELECTRICITY: MUSCLE OF INDUSTRY

Behind the great industrial might of America stands a "giant workman" — electric energy. It would require the muscle energy of 70 men working 40 hours a week for one whole year to equal 10,000 kilowatt hours of electricity — less than the average annual consumption of two Vepco residential customers. Yes, electricity is the "muscle" behind our power and prosperity.

Notes About the Book

The 1968 WITNESS was printed by the Taylor Publishing Company of Dallas, Texas with the special assistance of Mr. Pete Peterson.

The paper stock is 80 pound double-coated Enamel.

Headlines are in 24-point Futura Medium, Body copy is in 12-point Bodoni with 2-point leading, captions in 10-point, and identification, index, and senior directory in 8-point.

Special appreciation goes to Norman Kirshbaum of Thalhimers Studio and to literary consultant Mr. William Caldwell.

Completion is the polished mass, a conglomeration of days and events compiled to represent one year of effort, failures, and triumphs, one part of the mass of life.
